GAGLARDI SIGNS ON SCRAP HEAP

Those "Sorry for the Inconvenience" signs will soon be no more.

The highways department sign shop in Langford is producing a new sign.

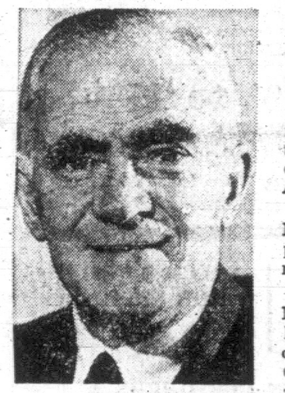
"Building for the Future of B.C." is the greeting motorists will receive when they approach highway construction work.

A spokesman said this sign, which also says "highway improvement project, government of B.C., department of highways," will be used on all highway construction projects.

The "Sorry for the Inconvenience" signs carried the signature of P. A. Gaglardi, the former highways minister who resigned a year ago.

U.K. Protects Ties With U.S.

LONDON (CP)—Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart said today Britain refused to trade its friendship with the United States for a European trade alliance with President de Gaulle of France.



STEWART
. . . rebuffs France

Stewart's statement was the first by a British government official since Friday's disclosure—on the eve of President Nixon's trip to Europe—that de Gaulle had sought British help to form a new alliance that would scuttle the European Common Market and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Foreign Minister Michel Debre of France denied the report and criticized Britain for releasing it.

Stewart told a seminar of the Fabian Society, a socialist intellectual group: "We cannot accept what appears to be Gen. de Gaulle's thesis that friendship and alliance with America is necessarily the same as dependence on America."

DEFENDS POLICY

Stewart defended the policy of Western European allies on maintaining close ties with the Americans.

"The United States alone among the super powers in the world is a democracy," he said. "For example, people who disagree with the policy of the U.S. government on Vietnam can and do say so.

"This is one very powerful reason why we should want good British-American relations and it is one powerful reason behind the existence of NATO."

In the British version of the French proposal, de Gaulle was quoted as saying France alone of the Western European states had established a position of total independence from the United States. British sources quoted him as saying the pro-Americanism of France's European friends represents the main obstacles to a true European unity and independence.

OBJECTIVE UNCHANGED

Meanwhile, informed sources said today Britain's basic objective will continue to be membership in the Common Market because it thinks it is the best path toward integration of Europe.

Britain rejected outright some of de Gaulle's ideas and reacted coolly toward the others. The suggestions were made to Christopher Soames, British ambassador to France, during a meeting with de Gaulle Feb. 4, the sources said.

The sources said that Britain

Arab Countries on Alert For Israeli Retaliation

Times News Services

The Middle East situation is deteriorating to a point where terrorism may sweep the antagonists into a new war.

There is little doubt that Israeli military forces are tugging at the leash, anxious to retaliate against the latest incidents, one of them in historically-neutral Switzerland

The question being asked in most Arab capitals today is where, when and how will the Israelis strike next.

Friday's terrorist blast in a Jerusalem supermarket removed any Arab doubts that the Israelis will launch a retaliatory blow for Tuesday's Arab guerrilla attack on an El Al airliner at Zurich Airport.

The four likeliest Arab targets are Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon. The four governments disclaim responsibility for the guerrillas' acts but they all have expressed varying degrees of support for the guerrilla movement.

They are Israel's closest neighbors and all report their defences on the alert for an expected counter-blow.

The Lebanese, still reeling from the political and economic repercussions of Israel's attack on Beirut International Airport Dec. 28, are worried.

The next blow is expected to be equally spectacular. Speculation here includes the possibility of another strike on an Arab airport, attacks on highways, bridges, dams or oil installations, or a concerted swoop on Arab civilian airlines, in the air or on the ground.

Meanwhile, Ambassador Gunnar Jarring will shift his Middle East peace operations next week to his headquarters in Nicosia, Cyprus, a United Nations spokesman announced.

This plan appeared to represent a realization on Jarring's part that he cannot expect quick four-power agreement here on action to buttress his role in discussions with the Arabs and Israelis.

Trust Bail-Out Under Attack

BLACK POWER SIGNS UP INDIANS

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto's Black Power movement Friday formed a coalition with Indian activists known as the Black Liberation Front and its Indian Supporters.

At a meeting of 200 black militants, Indians and students, Jose Garcia, executive secretary of the black Liberation Front of Canada, said the organization is allying itself "with our Indian brothers and eventually with other minority groups similarly oppressed."

Boys Try To Spend $40,000

DALY CITY, Calif. (AP)—If you were 15 or 16 years old and stumbled upon $40,000 in stolen cash, what would you do?

Three Daly City boys took it, another shared it with 47 schoolmates and two adults in a month-long spending spree that came to light Friday.

The money was the major portion of $44,000 stolen from a Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. packet in an armored car at Sunnyvale, Calif., last November.

The armored car driver, Nick Avtonoff, 24, was arrested Thursday and charged with grand theft, but Police Chief Ray W. Savage of suburban Broadmoor said: "He never got to enjoy it."

CHAIN OF EVENTS

The chief related this chain of events:

Three boys, 15 and 16, got jobs last Christmas at a bowling alley in nearby Colma. Assigned to check rental lockers, they found $2,000 in a paper sack and $38,000 in a flight bag.

They took the $2,000 but were afraid to take the rest.

In January, they confided in five older boys, got the master locker key and picked up the $38,000.

Roger D. Belaskie, 24, an unemployed linen worker, got onto it, told the boys—incorrectly — that police were on their trail. Savage said he got enough to buy a $2,900 car, a $1,900 motorcycle, a $760 color television set, and $400 in rifles, and had $3,200 left when police caught up with him.

Opposition Sees Additional Scandal

By JOHN MIKA
Legislative Reporter

The provincial government's plan to bail out the foundering Commonwealth Trust Company's 600 shareholders with a $3 million interest-free loan ran into immediate fire Friday from NDP and Liberal spokesmen who contended it would add one more scandal to the mess.

The bitter reaction to the loan proposal differed sharply from general applause which greeted Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's announcement that a wide-ranging royal commission had been established.

The three-man commission is to find out who put the 50-company Commonwealth group, masterminded by Vancouver lawyer G. Duncan Crux, into serious financial straits.

Peterson said the commission hearings would be in the open to "let the chips fall where they may". It could result in a complete revamping of the still-fledgling Securities Commission Act and other "watchdog" procedures instituted by former attorney-general Robert Bonner.

To Question Gunderson's Role

PETERSON
. . . move criticized

In a telephone interview from Seattle, Crux said he welcomed the royal commission probe and hoped it "would be a dandy," and wide-open to public view.

"I will particularly be interested in having a complete disclosure of what's been going on —including all secret government information and dealings between their departments concerning these matters — made public."

Opposition members' statements indicated that they will ask during the public hearings about the role in company operations of Einar Gunderson, officially connected to the government, whose chartered accountancy firm was auditor of Commonwealth Trust's bookkeeping reports.

Gunderson was appointed first Social Credit finance minister 17 years ago, by co-incidence the same time that Crux began building his financial empire.

He has for years been a key executive of the government-owned B.C. Hydro and Pacific Great Eastern Railway and also has been identified as the Social Credit Party's chief election campaign fund collector.

'Unfortunate'

Gunderson also was the provisional chairman of Premier Bennett's aborted government-controlled Bank of B.C. and then switched to become chairman of the private Bank of B.C. which finally obtained a federal charter with a board of directors that included the premier's eldest son, R. J. Bennett.

Crux, who left Canada before RCMP seized a warehouse-full of documents from 35 of the Commonwealth companies last fall, last month in an interview in Seattle said the timing of government actions was "unfortunate" because it prompted rumors of a campaign to kill Commonwealth Trust as the chief competitor of the Bank of B.C.

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) told reporters

Three Firms Bankrupt, Court Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three companies in the Commonwealth group should be declared bankrupt, receiver-manager A. D. Peter Stanley reported in an affidavit filed in the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

He estimated the deficiencies of the three companies total almost $13,000,000.

The affidavit, filed Thursday, listed the companies as Commonwealth Acceptance Corporation Ltd., estimated deficiency $7,059,453; Commonwealth Savings Plan, Ltd., estimated deficiency $2,905,453; and Commonwealth Investors Syndicate Ltd., estimated deficiency $2,973,286.

Mr. Stanley said in the affidavit that he felt it would be in the best interests of all the unsecured creditors and all those having a financial interest in the three companies that each file for bankruptcy.

The affidavit said that none of the three companies is able to meet its obligations.

Man Stabs Girl In Plane Incident

AMSTERDAM (Reuters) — A man with a knife attacked and injured a 14-year-old girl passenger aboard a Dutch airliner over the Atlantic early today, an airline spokesman has announced.

The girl was identified as Martha Nijuis, flying from Montreal to The Netherlands with her parents to visit relatives.

Royal Dutch Airline officials first said the girl was Canadian but later said they were not sure if she was of Dutch or Canadian nationality.

The girl was taken to hospital with face and hand injuries as soon as the plane landed at Amsterdam Airport.

Her attacker was identified as M. R. Zadourian, a 24-year-old Iranian pipe fitter who worked in Toronto for 11 months.

The man was tied up and confined at the rear of the KLM DC-8 on its overnight flight from Montreal to Amsterdam because of his aggressive attitude to passengers.

But he cut himself free with the knife and assailed the girl, who happened to be sitting near him, the airline spokesman said.

The spokesman for KLM said the man had objected to being returned to Tehran from Toronto.

Madness Leading to Big War?

By DAN MORGAN

BONN (WP) — There are growing signs in West Germany that the country's political leaders were having second thoughts in the developing Berlin crisis.

In public opinion, the press and the private remarks of political officials, there were definite indications that Communist pressure has finally begun to diminish Bonn's enthusiasm for electing the federal president in the city of West Berlin in March.

"This is madness, the kind of policy which could lead us right into World War Three," remarked one Social Democratic official.

NO QUICK CHANGE

However, high West German sources reached late Friday did not give the impression that they were ready actually to change the election site, at least for now.

New Communist pressure in the last 24 hours took the form of a Moscow announcement of troop manoeuvres of the Soviet Union and East German peoples army in early March, to coincide with the election.

The German press office reported Friday night that Soviet ambassador Semyon Tsarapkin was standing by for a possible meeting with Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger.

German sources said that Kiesinger and All German Affairs Minister Herbert Wehner —both of whom have had serious doubts about holding the election in West Berlin — conferred Thursday on the Berlin question.

There were persistent reports in authoritative West German circles of renewed interest in probing Soviet readiness for a compromise solution, involving a revocation of the West German decision coupled with some friendly gesture by the East Germans or Soviets.

The French government urged the West Germans last fall to try to strike a bargain with East Germany which would reopen talks on West Berliners getting visiting passes for East Berlin, in exchange for transferring the electoral meeting to West German territory.

On Thursday the opposition Free Democratic Party broke the ice by calling openly for a reassessment of the Berlin decision between the Bonn parties. Within one of the governmental parties (the Social Democrats) Bundestag officials said the possibility of talks with the Free Democrats was not being ruled out.

NO DISGRACE

The FPD contended Thursday that it would be no disgrace to transfer the meeting since sufficient solidarity with the city would be demonstrated by the combined effect of last week's visit to the city by Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain and the scheduled Feb. 27 visit of Mr. Nixon there.

Berkeley Approves Quick Suspensions

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

University of California regents have given campus administrators power to suspend students without an immediate hearing in an attempt to quell chaotic conditions of the Berkeley campus.

The regents met Friday in Berkeley as 2,500 protesters demonstrated noisily nearby, jeering Gov. Ronald Reagan. Several students lobbed firecrackers in the general direction of the meeting.

But heavy rain and 1,000 National Guard troops camped five miles away averted a repetition of Thursday's violent clash between police and 2,000 demonstrators.

The new policy, approved on an 18-to-3 vote, calls for immediate suspension of students when "there is reasonable cause to believe" they disrupted a campus by violence, threats or other activities. Suspended students would have a hearing within two weeks and would face suspension for a full semester or possible expulsion from the university.

. . . TRUST BAIL-OUT

outside the House Friday that the revelation of "incompetence and inattention to duties required of this government over the last eight years by the Trust Companies Act, the Securities Act and the Companies Act may well spell the end of this government because it has rocked the business community.

"People are more and more realizing that private investors must be strictly supervised by people who are not willing to turn their eyes away from what their friends are doing.

"The incredible thing is that the old friend of this government, Mr. Gunderson, who occupies important posts in this government, could not have seen the fantastic inter-company transactions plainly visible to anyone who took the trouble to check the files of the registrar of companies.

'Had Some Duty'

"Surely his firm, as auditors of these companies over the years, had some duty to report these transactions," said Dowding.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer echoed the demand for close scrutiny of Gunderson's role in the Commonwealth Trust Company's crisis.

"A very complete and thorough investigation of the whole Commonwealth Trust, and its associated companies, mess has to be made," he told reporters.

"We deplore the way the government has handled the whole affair.

"It has failed to perform its watchdog function.

"And the auditors — Gunderson, Walton and Stokes—failed to point out certain facts in their audit."

McGeer said the December, 1967, audit signed by the Gunderson firm showed a $600,000 loan that was improper.

"They (auditors) failed to point out that this company was in violation of the Trust Company Act

"We just don't think that performance is good enough," said McGeer.

Liberal MLA Garde Gardom widened the target in his corridor statement.

He said the claim that "everything was hunky-dory" before the federal officials came on the scene two years ago "appears to be little more than a whopper of a fairy tale.

"A cloud still hangs over the activities of the (trust company) inspector, Minister of Finance (Premier Bennett) and the attorney-general, or any combination of them, as to what they did or did not know and what they did or did not do."

Attorney-General Peterson finally broke the government's silence in a prepared statement to a tense Legislature after criticism in the House, which began last session, and recent legal actions had suddenly snowballed the Commonwealth situation into a major issue of this session.

Immediate Start

He announced:

Chairman of the royal commission, to start immediately, is Mr. Justice M. M. McFarlane of the B.C. appeal court, who has had extensive experience in corporate organization and financial institutions;

Robert F. Gardiner, a prominent Vancouver chartered accountant who "has had previous experience in security investigations";

And Robert Phipps, recently retired in Victoria after serving as western regional manager of the Royal Trust Company.

Peterson said the commission will not affect the day-to-day operations of the companies nor will it delay the current RCMP investigation of the companies or any proceedings that "may be launched" by the investigators.

He added the investigation isn't over and the financial situation of all the group's interlocking companies "isn't clear" yet to the cabinet.

He said the main principals who created the empire besides Crux, were Mrs. Margaret A. Harling and Dr. C. G. Polvliet of Vancouver.

Details Revealed

Peterson also revealed some of the details of the debacle in the province's only trust company which is chartered and supervised by the B.C. government.

They have been simmering under government wraps for almost two years since first being discovered by federal officials who were asked to insure the deposits of the B.C. company.

STANLEY
. . . loan needed

Although 15 corrective measures were demanded and not carried out by the company, Peterson revealed only the three "main problems" — improper inter-company transactions using the trust firm's money: and "imprudent and unprofitable investment by way of a $2.2 million mortgage" given a Powell River resort spa; and a $200,000 shortfall in paying for shares by Crux and other "insiders" of the group.

Peterson also read a lengthy letter from Vancouver chartered accountant A. D. Stanley —who was appointed secretly as manager and trustee of Commonwealth Trust last summer after Peterson was sworn in as attorney-general in place of Bonner.

Stanley said a major loan from the government was needed to restore confidence so that vitally-needed new working capital could be raised through sale of new shares.

Otherwise, he warned, the company would collapse and touch off on investment crisis as big as Ontario's Atlantic Acceptance and Prudential Finance scandals — and damage B.C.'s image in New York, London and other financial centres.

Loan Conditions

Peterson announced the government proposes, if the Legislature passes enabling legislation, to lend up to $3 million without any interest charges to the trust company for five years.

He attached a condition that the company raise at least $1 million of private capital through sale of new shares.

He said the government loan would match dollar-for-dollar the amount raised privately up to the maximum figures which, totalling both public and shareholder capital, could inject $6 million into the faltering company "and we think that would easily be enough."

Peterson, reading a note passed to him while he was on his feet, announced that Commonwealth Trust's directors had just scheduled a shareholder meeting for March 21, presumably to vote on the government's plan to give it an interest-free loan so it could stay solvent a while longer.

Peterson said that while responding to Stanley's request for a loan, the government was attaching the matching-dollars and a pre-set minimum on private capital because it "recognizes that, in the final analysis, it is the directors and shareholders who can bring about a healthy financial picture."

Withering Scorn

But, while welcoming the royal commission probe, opposition spokesmen outside the House levelled a withering scorn against the proposed loan to a private company.

Liberals Garde Gardom and Allan Williams pointed out that while the federal government was insuring the 15,000 depositors with savings in Commonwealth Trust's vaults—up to $20,000 each—the provincial government was proposing to make a pure gift of between $3 and $4 million with public taxes to some 600 private shareholders by foregoing all interest payments.

They pointed out that this was the amount of interest the public treasury would lose if the loan to Commonwealth was made even on the favorable terms of 9 per cent compound interest the budget proposes for its $5,000 second mortgage loans to citizens trying to buy their first house.

The NDP's Dowding added that the government must first take steps through legislation, as he suggested earlier this week, to secure the company's assets from any further improper transactions by impounding the controlling shares of the group's key company, Commonwealth Investors Syndicate.

No Guarantee

Unless this is done there will be no guarantee that either the public money or new private capital will not go down the same drain that created the present crisis, Mr. Dowding said.

McGeer also hit hard at this aspect.

He said the government proposed to lend $5,000 at 9 per cent to "little people" trying to buy a home "but to a group of select shareholders they are willing to lend $3 million at no interest and with no security.

He noted that one of the principals of the group was no longer in this country.

"Obviously taxpayers should not be asked to bail such individuals out or to help them in any way.

"If the attorney-general can show us in any way how some of the little people who have been taken to the cleaners by this operation can be helped out, we would become much more interested.

"But a loan from the government must not be made for the primary benefit of a select group of shareholders.

"That would be an unconscionable act."

Clarifies Position

Peterson, in his speech to the Legislature, carefully made it plain the trust company's affairs were in a tailspin before he was made attorney-general last summer and made the decisions to install a trustee, seize records and freeze assets of some of the companies and individuals involved.

After recounting some of the mounting troubles of the company, he told the House "it became obvious in late June that substantial compliance with the (government) order was not forthcoming and continued heavy losses were resulting from day-to-day operation of the trust company.

"This was the general situation when I assumed the responsibilities of attorney-general," he said.

. . . U.K.

also fundamentally disagreed with the attitude shown by de Gaulle on relations with the United States.

These sources said de Gaulle, in making the large European economic association suggestion, also said there should be a smaller inner council of an European political association consisting of France, Britain, West Germany and Italy.

NOT FRENCH POLICY

But French official sources in Paris Friday night said that the idea of a four-power "directorate" was so much against French policy that this did not merit a denial.

The reported disclosures of de Gaulle's talks with Soames came just two days before President Nixon begins a Western European tour Sunday. The American leader is scheduled to arrive here Monday for talks with Prime Minister Wilson, and in Paris Feb. 28 for discussions with de Gaulle.

The British government completely disagrees with the concept of a four-power inner political council. British policy in trying to join the European community always has been to treat all the smaller states as equals and not to attempt to establish a big-power hegemony.

During the meeting with Soames, de Gaulle is reported to have said it is impossible to arrive at a European view because of the strong pro-American feeling of all countries in Europe, particularly Britain.

Canada NATO Verdict May Be Speeded Up

By STAN McDOWELL
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Timing of an announcement of Canada's decision to stay in or get out of NATO became a key question of the federal government's defence and foreign policy review Friday when Prime Minister Trudeau announced he would go to Washington to meet President Nixon March 24 and 25.

The major obstacle to a the Washington visit is the European tour planned by the parliamentary committee on external affairs and national defence March 9-23.

Mr. Trudeau said Friday the government would hold off its decision on NATO membership until it had received the committee report. He said the government had hoped to be able to announce its decision by mid-March but would wait if the committee report were not available until later in the month.

DEADLINE GIVEN

He said the "ultimate deadline" for a decision was the April 10 NATO ministerial meeting in Paris.

"Our view was that we should make the announcement as soon as possible so that the NATO meetings in Washington would be fully informed of Canada's position," Mr. Trudeau said in the Commons Friday, "that we tell our allies in advance what our decision was. However, we realize the importance of waiting for the report of the House committee and this may make us reconsider the date."

External Affairs Minister Sharp had said Thursday that the government hoped to make its decision "well in advance" of the April NATO meeting.

Mr. Trudeau said Friday that a mid-March target date had been set on the assumption that the committee report would be ready.

Until the announcement of the prime minister's Washington trip — the date of the visit was suggested by President Nixon — the delaying effect of the defence and external affairs committee's European tour on its report was a less serious problem.

"We can't send (Mr. Trudeau) down to Washington to tell the President of the United States that Canada hasn't made up its mind," one member said.

Seven Acres For Overpass

The provincial highways department is negotiating with the Tsawout Band on East Saanich Indian Reserve for lands needed for the Pat Bay Highway improvement project.

Band manager Victor Underwood Jr. said about seven acres of reserve lands near the Mount Newton intersection are required for the road development.

He said the department plans a diamond overpass at the intersection and the work requires about seven homes to be moved to new locations.

"We've had about three meetings," said Mr. Underwood.

He expected the band would call a meeting of residents in about 10 days before going back to the government to discuss settlement terms.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

If you have to smoke cigarettes, at least try not to do it when you are overly chilled or in danger of freezing your hands or feet. You can stay warm outdoors more efficiently if you don't smoke while your body is trying to produce enough heat to combat the weather.

The medical facts are that smoking may decrease the normal blood ciruclation. Nicotine in the tobacco smoke causes constriction of the blood vessels which in turn decreases the supply of blood to any part of your body that could suffer tissue injury due to freezing.

Instead of smoking that weed, try to get some hot tea or coffee inside you. And, for heaven's sake, don't try to warm up with liquor. Alcohol in the stomach can have a bad effect on your circulation — much worse than cigarette smoke inhaled into your lungs.

East Discovers West Has New Civic Concept

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

Esquimalt Mayor Ray Bryant, back in Victoria after attending the big Toronto conference on transportation, is still muttering about eastern newspapers and civic officials.

Hume

It seems that most of the delegates attending the conference were more excited about a new form of government in Ontario than they were about transportation.

In fact most of the Ontarians were so enthused about their year old fourth level of government that they felt it could solve most of the transportation problems facing urban areas across the country.

And the more they waxed lyrical, the more depressed Mayor Bryant became. Especially when they unveiled for all of Canada this exciting new concept of regional government.

Mayor Bryant reports that he was "both amazed and annoyed at the constant references to this new form of government Ontario was offering to Canada."

Not New to West

To make matters worse Mayor Bryant protested to one group of Ontarians that B.C. has had regional governments working throughout the province for three years. The complaint was received with a wry chuckle for, after all, Mayor Bryant is from B.C. and all easterners know we follow them, never lead.

"They just wouldn't believe me," Mayor Bryant grumbles. "They lifted their eyebrows, smiled tolerantly and asked why it was that if B.C. had installed the regional government system three years ago they had never heard of it east of the Rockies."

A 21-gun barrage from William E. Morrison reached my desk this week to protest last Saturday's column, which stated that for too long in this city power plays by individual hospitals have wasted both time and money and delayed hospital co-ordination programs.

Mr. Morrison, the administrator at Gorge Road Hospital, is far pleasanter to me than his pen indicates.

He wrote: "As a member of the previous advisory committee to the regional hospital district board, and likewise a member of the newly constituted committee, I most certainly take umbrage with what I consider to be spurious reporting.

Criticizes Column

"I am sure the hospital committee welcomes reasoned, constructive criticism, when deserving, but defamatory, ill-conceived, erroneous statements made with, in my view, an obvious lack of insight and knowledge, are of no value whatsoever in the provision and maintenance of good hospital care in our community.

"The functioning of the original advisory committee in no way resembled the picture painted, and hopefully the new committee won't, either."

The day after that missive was delivered (and it is to be hoped you noticed the writer failed to differentiate between "news" and a column of "comment") the teletypes, without prompting, chattered into the office a story from a hospitals' conference in Quebec.

The keynote speaker was Dr. E. W. Barootes of Regina. A few quotes from that speech:

"I get the impression that each group (doctors, administrators, planners, nurses, advisers) is convinced that they are the true leaders in the hospital field, that they suffer the others only in a subordinate role, that instead of respecting you each resent and suspect the motives of others."

On administrators: "A survey done of all directives and orders issued from all hospital branches shows that nine out of 10 have nothing to do with patient care but are chiefly designed for the comfort and convenience of the hospital workers."

And: "In 20-years administrative space in hospitals has multiplied tenfold and patient space shrunken to far less than 50 per cent of the hospital area. Soon we will meet that sublimely administered hospital which has no room left for that unnecessary evil, the patient."

Things can't be that bad in Victoria, can they?

When Mr. Morrison hand-delivered his note of protest one question was asked: "Are you trying to claim that in the past there have been no power-plays from one hospital group or another to the detriment of the hospital picture as a whole?"

"Not around the committee table," Mr. Morrison answered.

Outside the committee room, in the privacy of individual board rooms?

"I wouldn't know about that," was the reply.

In this writer's opinion Mr. Morrison does know, so do others engaged in the hospital field. So does the general public which, far more astute than most people realize, has watched the tug-of-war for years.

Did Rest Haven pull all the political stops it could because it believed the north end of the Saanich Peninsula really needed a major hospital?

Did St. Joseph's hire Dr. Harvey Agnew as their prime consultant because he was the best available or because they felt, as the father of the now famous Agnew report, it would be difficult for government to reject the advice of a man they regarded as the master-planner?

Inside City Hall

Does Jubilee want to administer the new Eric Martin Institute because it will save administrative money or because it will give Jubilee a positive edge in attracting top medical men, top interns, top nurses to their team?

There is no doubt that each hospital, in its own way, is desirous of providing the best care for its patients, the best facilities, the best administration. In that light their motives are admirable.

One Hospital Area

But what they must appreciate, and what to date they have failed to appreciate, is that there no longer exist half-a-dozen hospital communities in this area. There is one and one only, governed by the Regional Hospital District Board. Its task is to provide the best in health services and hospital care for the entire district at whatever cost in cash or pride.

There are no prizes for guessing who provided the last two paragraphs of this column. Just list him as a politician who, while speaking of other things, passed on some good advice to those involved in Greater Victoria's hospital programs.

"I believe that it is our duty not to try to conserve everything and every tradition of the past or every solution or every doctrine which has applied in the past.

"I believe we must experiment with our times and risk some solutions which may not be comfortable, but which are necessary to put us into the world of tomorrow instead of staying with the world of yesterday."

And I believe that Mayor Hugh Stephen, chairman of the Regional Hospital District Board, while not the author of those words, subscribes to the philosophy.

BRYANT
. . . easterners smug?

The sooner individual hospitals accept the power and the authority of the board that Mayor Stephen chairs, the sooner they will come to accept the fact that an essential change in attitude is required.

Inebriates Spoil Wheel Claim

"Man's greatest invention was the wheel until he got behind it . . . drunk," neurologist Dr. Charles Simpson said Friday night.

He was addressing the opening session of a symposium on drinking and driving sponsored by the Greater Victoria Association on Alcoholism.

The discussions continued today.

The neurologist hit his small audience in the YM-YWCA building lounge with a few gruesome statistics: 85 per cent of all traffic accidents result in head injuries, and then there's the awesome hospital cost to the community; cars happen to be the most serious disease among people aged 5-39; and more than 50 per cent of fatal accidents involve alcohol.

Psychopathic drivers represent the greatest driving hazard on the streets today, he said.

(The psychopath, according to one liberal definition, is a fairly common phenomenon in our society: he is generally a person who acts in terms of the present, rather than in the terms of the past or the future.)

Placed behind the wheel of a sports car it stands to reason the young psychopath tends to get impatient with an old lady placed behind the wheel of a chugger.

"The old lady driving up Fort Street isn't a menace in herself. She is a menace in that she stirs up younger and more aggressive drivers."

Dr. Simpson concluded that the final solution might be the development of a more efficient form of public transport.

Meeting in the Shadow

CANADA'S RELATIONSHIP TO its giant neighbor creates problems of procedure in our affairs quite apart from the periodic differences of opinion that arise between the two countries. We try to maintain the independent course in world affairs that a sovereign nation rightfully should, yet few of our policy decisions can be made without at least some consideration of their effect or lack of effect on the United States, and some influence inevitably must be felt by our policy makers.

The pending visit of Mr. Trudeau to Washington provides an example of the effects of the giant's shadow. Ottawa will probably decide to remain within the NATO defence structure—to reject it would, for one thing, be completely to repudiate External Affairs Minister Sharp, who has given a clear indication of his own feelings on the matter. But a formal decision must await the report of the committee now studying the situation.

The problem then arises: should Mr. Trudeau visit President Nixon before the government's decision on NATO is made, or afterwards. If the government registered a negative on NATO, then a subsequent friendly visit to Washington would be a difficult one indeed. But an affirmative decision, if made after the Washington visit, would leave Mr. Trudeau open to opposition claims that he had gone to Washington for instructions. Under such circumstances, decision-making becomes complicated not only in substance but also in timing and method.

There has been some comment on the delay of Mr. Trudeau's first contact with the United States President. He has been in office nearly a year now without the traditional visit to Washington, while Mr. Nixon has altered the usual custom of new presidents by arranging a European tour before visiting his nearest neighbor. This situation, of course, could have its advantages. Mr. Trudeau will have had time to get his roots down as government leader, Mr. Nixon will have gathered valuable information from abroad and will have had an opportunity to complete much of his administrative change-over.

But the meeting of two such unlike individuals should prove to be an interesting one, and since the personal relations of the heads of the two countries usually set the pace for the international climate — Mr. Diefenbaker's rather dismal contacts with Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Kennedy are still remembered — a crucial one as well.

Canadians have not yet fully adapted themselves to Mr. Trudeau's style — his candid comments on important issues, his "debating union" approach to some controversial matters, his readiness to reopen accepted policy stands or to alter his position in the face of logical argument —and so unorthodox a political personality could, for a seasoned politician such as Mr. Nixon, provide some initial misunderstandings. It will be a test for both men, and we can only hope, in these difficult times, that each of them will pass it.

So We Know What's Going On

AGAINST THE BACKGROUND of the many sweeping recommendations of the Carter Commission on Taxation in 1966, it soon became obvious that some important changes would be planned for the Canadian taxation system, and the original intention was to put these before the public in a White Paper so that there would be full discussion and understanding of the alterations.

But when Mr. Benson assumed the finance portfolio, he announced that he would proceed directly to the preparation of a bill embodying the taxation changes, and skip the White Paper stage. Now the Minister has had second thoughts and it is to his credit that he has decided to reverse his earlier decision. Mr. Benson has announced that a White Paper will be produced, outlining the government's policies on income tax. Based on this, a Parliamentary committee will study draft legislation, with an opportunity for the public to present its views, and only after this process will the tax bill be presented to Parliament.

In view of the magnitude of the changes which apparently are in prospect, it is important that the people should thoroughly understand the alterations and the reasons for them. Otherwise there would inevitably be much more criticism and dissatisfaction than might normally be expected. The White Paper stage will be a valuable opportunity to obtain nation-wide understanding. Mr. Benson has complicated his task to some extent, but made it, in the long run, very much easier and more satisfactory.

Between the Cup and the Lip

WITH A FEW FIGURES, MR. Allan Cox, the Liberal MLA for Oak Bay, has cut a swath through the fields of Social Credit budget rhetoric related to educational finance. The government, he says, points to the large sums spent on schools—and Mr. Cox does not contest that point. But, he adds, "it could provide a much better and much more equitable educational system by spending some more money and could certainly have done a much better job if it had spent the money which this Legislature has voted for education in recent years."

Supporting his case, he quotes from Public Accounts the amounts under-expended in the educational estimates: $12 million in 1967, $6 million in 1968 and, on the basis of the average to the end of December 1968, $12 million in 1969.

While these amounts were unspent, though approved, Mr. Cox points out that schools lacked adequate libraries, activity rooms, and gymnasiums.

"Each year," he says, "it (the government) passes a dynamic budget with plenty of money in it to provide for these (library) facilities." But what appears in the budget, on the basis of his interpretation of Public Accounts, somehow fails to buy the service that is needed. The children are shortchanged.

Mr. Cox has offered impressive evidence of what happens between the cup and the lip, as that old saying applies to government handling of educational finance.

Still a Mystery

SOCIAL CREDIT'S MEMBER FOR Skeena, Mr. D. G. Little, has offered an interesting epilogue in the legislature to the puzzling Ben Ginter-Tartan Breweries Ltd. case.

Mr. Ginter, it will be recalled, wanted to sell canned beer at 10 cents a dozen less than the provincial government's Liquor Board was prepared to allow. Mr. Little explains that this was 10 cents less than the price at which the national breweries could sell their products. As Mr. Little sees it, the government bowed to Eastern interests at the expense of a home-based industry and the beer drinking public.

Mr. Little's question, "Why," must be a rhetorical one, especially for a member of the government party. Most MLAs have heard of election expenses and contributions — and the so-called "educational fund" established by the Social Credit Party.

Nature Rambles

By Freeman King

For contrast in the ways of nature during the thaw go over the high ridge trails at Francis Park.

Under the trees, where the moss banks are, you can find the calypso leaves which now show a very dark green against the shiny light green of the chickweed which is already blooming.

Look around the ants' nests and you will find that the miner's lettuce has spread, its many base leaves in a rosette. They are quite thick. Perhaps the soil is warmed and some chemical from the ants has made it grow more luxuriantly.

Most of the nests are at the base of an old fir tree and, if you look closely where the sun strikes, you will find many tiny little flies that have crawled from the cracks to sun themselves.

In the open, where the maples are with lots of lichens growing on the limbs, you find the same thing—many little insects moving about. This draws the little brown creeper searching for food.

Close to the nature house, where the old arbutus tree is covered with ivy, you can find many black flies buzzing among the leaves. Some of the honey bees from the winter colony that is down in the meadow seem to find something there I wonder just what it is.

As you move down into the draws, where the salal is thick, you can see how it is recovering from the weight of snow and soon will be back to its normal height. This is because nature has built into this shrub a set of springs. If it were not so this particular plant would have long since vanished.

See how the broom has been bent and broken by the weight of the snow. Maybe this will help to hold it in check.

Stumbling Blocks Obstructing China Recognition

Hutchison

THE Chinese puzzle which the Canadian government has undertaken to solve is even more complicated than it looks. But unlike Canada's threat to abandon NATO, this enterprise does not necessarily risk a serious break with the United States. If things go well—a very big if — it may even facilitate long-run as distinguished from short-run American foreign policy. Canadians will be quite wrong, however, if they suppose that their recognition of China is already assured and only requires two signatures on a dotted line. In fact, the difficulties ahead of the able Mitchell Sharp as he begins these negotiations are baffling and may prove to be insurmountable.

Meanwhile the Canadian initiative has split the opinion of the United States government and Congress cleanly down the middle. The two conflicting views in Washington are well understood, of course, in Ottawa but not yet by the Canadian public.

In the State Department the men who may be called the Old China Hands and have no partisan attachments, are firmly convinced that the Chinese Communist government is not ready, and will not be ready for some years at least, to recognize the realities of the world, even if it is ready to recognize Canada for reasons of temporary convenience.

As they see it, after lifelong study of China's history, this ancient and indestructible nation has survived two distinct epochs and is about to enter a third. Until the white men's ships first reached the coast of eastern Asia, China was the sacred Middle Kingdom, regarding itself as the centre and the pinnacle of human civilization. Beyond its boundaries all men were barbarians and lesser breeds without the law. Then, in the nineteenth century, under the white man's pressure and crimes, China slipped from the top to the bottom of the world.

In this unique and traumatic experience the Chinese mind became convinced that a great nation must either occupy the pinnacle or the abyss. The Western principle of equality between nations, with inviolable rights assured for even the smallest, was alien to Chinese thought and is still alien to the mystical thoughts of Mao Tse-tung. But according to the thought of the Old China Hands in Washington, a younger generation of Chinese statesmen is gradually realizing that the modern world cannot be dominated by China, Russia, the United States or any other power and must learn to delimit national sovereignties by accepted rules of conduct or eventually destroy itself.

Won't Tame Ideology

This process will take even more time in China than in the Western societies and the Chinese government, with or without Mao, will not be ready to enter the family of nations for 10 or 15 years yet. Hence while Canada may be able to place an ambassador in Peking it will not change or tame the current Chinese ideology in the least. And contrary to some starry-eyed views held in Ottawa, Canada's recognition of China will not "break the ice" for later recognition by the United States.

All such theories are flatly rejected by a powerful group in the American government and especially in the Senate. These men are eager for Canada to negotiate with China as a clear, clinical test of the Chinese government's real intentions which no one in authority at Washington pretends to understand.

If Mr. Sharp were dealing only with the mysterious figures in Peking his difficulties would be large enough in all conscience. They are immensely complicated by the necessity of dealing also with Formosa, the real core and sticking point of his problem.

Ideally Canada would recognize both mainland China and Formosa as separate sovereign states, but this two-China policy is anathema to Peking. It claims historical and legal authority over Formosa and doubtless would occupy it tomorrow if the United States fleet withdrew. As the price of recognition by Peking, Canada is reluctantly prepared, if necessary, to break diplomatic relations with Formosa if Formosa does not first break relations with Canada, which seems more probable.

Such a painful break, often considered but always rejected by the Pearson government, would not of itself solve Mr. Sharp's problem. He may well find that Peking will demand that Canada recognize Formosa as an integral part of China, to be occupied by mainland military forces as soon as they are able to cross the Formosa Strait. This demand would surely be unacceptable to any Canadian government for reasons both of morality and practical politics.

Truly a New Nation

Having toured this beautiful island and talked with Chiang Kai-shek, and many better men around him, I concluded, as an ignorant outsider, that Formosa had made itself truly a new nation, in economic terms the most successful Asiatic nation next to Japana. The same view has been accepted, over the years, by more informed men in Ottawa and is now the official Canadian view.

In any case, a Canadian nation which jealously guards its own independent sovereignty can never deny the right of self-determination to the people of Formosa when Canada asserts that right for many nations far smaller and less important in the world community.

Thus if China's demands are excessive Mr. Sharp will face a harsh moral dilemma. If he were to accept them he would face an equally harsh political dilemma in the United States. For if one fact is certain among all these uncertainties, it is that no American government will abandon the Formosan people to the mercy of the Chinese Communists or forgive a Canadian government which was prepared to do so.

Protected By U.S.

In terms of actual power the Trudeau government argues, quite rightly, that Canada cannot decide or even seriously influence the future of Formosa because it is securely protected by the United States.

It also argues, with equal justice, that Chiang Kai-shek's claim to lead the legal government of mainland China is an absurd fiction which should be ended without further delay. Finally, by recognizing Peking, Canada is prepared to risk a definite loss of influence in Japan, the Philippines and other southeast Asian nations that are closely linked with Formosa by history, trade and military defence.

Mr. Sharp's main risk, however, lies in the United States, not because it will try to stop Canada's recognition of China and may privately welcome it under satisfactory conditions, but because the United States is determined to maintain Formosa as an independent and credible nation and expects Canada to do likewise. If Mr. Sharp can avoid a stumble in his diplomacy, if he can uncover all these Chinese boxes within boxes he will prove himself to be of history's greatest locksmiths.

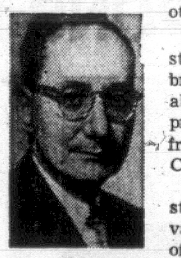
FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

A Cautious Reading of Russian Direction Signs



Frye

ONE of the most interesting and revealing comments to come from a Russian diplomat in some time was made at a news conference this past week by Soviet UN delegate Yakov Malik. Asked if an East-West quarrel over the seating of West Germany in an important UN planning commission could be expected to compromise efforts to improve Soviet-American relations in other areas — missile control, for example, and co-operation on the Middle East — Malik said:

"Those are completely separate matters, not connected (to the UN fight) at all."

The questioner had offered Malik a chance to bolster his case against Bonn by threatening or hinting at reprisals against Washington. Malik passed up the opportunity.

Important as it was to him to keep Bonn from upstaging the rickety Ulbricht regime in East Germany, the objective of cultivating President Nixon had higher priority.

It was a small matter quickly passed over. But it was not without significance.

The Kremline rarely withholds any ammunition when it is in a fire-fight. In other ways, Malik was going all out to prevent UN "recognition" for West Germany, a non-member of the world organization.

Four years ago, when Moscow and Washington were locked in a UN battle over Russia's dues arrears, Soviet spokesmen often said or implied that American hostility on this issue was prejudicing Soviet-American relations in other, more significant, fields.

The change in tactics could not have stemmed from a downgrading of Ulbricht. Russia invaded Czechoslovakia, absorbing massive opprobrium, in part to protect the East German puppet leader from the dangerous contagion of liberal Communism.

Moscow is willing to let Ulbricht bolster his prestige, or at least his nuisance value, by proclaiming a partial blockade of access routes to West Berlin, thus risking considerable tension in central Europe.

The Kremlin is prepared to sacrifice some of Russia's own influence in the "third world" by threatening to boycott UN foreign-aid planning if West Germany, a major donor state, takes a seat on the commission, which is to prepare a ten-year development program.

Every sign is that the prestige and standing of East Germany continue to be extremely importat to Moscow. But not more important than the improvement of relations with the United States.

Apparently the Russians want very much to turn the East-West clock back to the period B.C. — before Czechoslovakia. If so, evidences of that policy should begin to turn up in other areas.

Logically, the Kremlin should at least delay any major Berlin blow-up until after Nixon has visited the city this coming week (Feb. 27).

Thereafter, Moscow similarly should keep Ulbricht's self-assertion in reasonably safe range—permitting enough fuss over West German's presidential election to save his face, and perhaps to find out if Western technicians can frustrate Soviet radar-jamming (information of considerable military value) but not provoking the kind of ultimate showdown that would involve American power.

Another area in which Soviet co-operation could usefully show up is the Mideast. A few more weeks like the past one, with more Israeli airliners shot up and expectable reactions from Israel, and armies may once again be marching.

Easier Access for Warships

To date, in private consultations here, the Soviet Union has seemed more interested in reoponing the Suez canal than in halting terrorism or in advancing a final settlement. Suez could give Soviet warships easier access to the Indian Ocean.

In many fields, Moscow's foreign policy seems puzzlingly inconsistent to the West. In Cuba, Fidel Castro is being unaccountably approachable on the subject of hijacked airplanes. In Peru, Kremlin trade policy is helping facilitate the tweaking of Uncle Sam's beard.

Perhaps reports of internal upheaval in the Kremlin need to be given greater credence. It would be logical for Soviet policy to be inconsistent if a severe power struggle were in process there.

No one can really say, at any given moment, what the Rusians are up to now. All that can be done is to study the indicators. This past week, some of the indicators pointed in the right direction, some of the time.

Next the Mafia Look

At the risk of appearing "goody-goody," may I question the motive behind the fashion designers' new look for women's pant-suits. The name of one suit is called "the gangster look" from the thirties. Maybe a gangster setting is considered thrilling?

Some coats have pockets with the "holster" look. Perhaps they will come out with a new Mafia model.

The Communist countries are making progress in wiping out gangsterism and prostitution. How are we doing?—Mrs. Berta Schmidt, 765 Arden.

The Work Must Go On

Some people in Victoria this year have cried their reasons for not giving to the Mothers' March for Crippled Children.

There is no cut rate method of helping a crippled child, and any dollar is worth much more if given with a smile. We need to have more confidence in the authority who keeps close to the work, lest we destroy the growth of care. It is so easy to block others' efforts, yet many groups like the Mothers' March help to remind the public that the work must go on.—Mrs. B. Brazil, 676 Battery St.

'Best of the Young Trying to Tell Us Something'

By TOM WICKER
New York Times

These are unquestionably times to try the souls of men who have to deal with students — and of many others, too, including parents who are footing college bills only to find that their sons and daughters are either striking, sitting in, demonstrating or having their education disrupted by more activist students.

Wicker

But that is precisely the challenge of all the trouble and troublemakers — at Wisconsin, at Duke, at Chicago, at City College of New York, at Brandeis.

No one suggests that college officials should give in to any and all demands. When black militants at Wisconsin demand an autonomous black studies department with the black students and the black faculty having the power to hire and fire all administrators and teachers having anything to do with black students, they are proposing something unwise in principle and unworkable in practice, to which university officials have no choice but to say "no."

At each of the troubled universities, moreover, the circumstances obviously vary; some of the administrations have responded less reasonably than others, some have been quicker than others to call in police or other armed assistance, and some have had to suffer more intransigent student militance. It is not possible, therefore, to make general comment on the specifics of these midwinter troubles.

At the least, however, as suggested this week by Dr. James E. Allen Jr., soon to be the U.S. Commissioner of Education, college trustees and officials should not dismiss the disturbances as nothing but the work of small activist groups; this would be merely a collegiate version of the fatuous outcry against "agitators" that used to be heard in the South on the civil rights question.

Nor is there any sensible point in legislating, as the New York State Senate has just done, against student activism.

That body's plan to bar state aid to students found guilty of virtually any unlawful activity on a college campus could only make matters worse — not least because it is precisely the kind of blind, angry and punitive response too many students have learned to expect from the older generation.

Rather, Allen said, trustees and officials ought to take the students seriously "and listen to them and treat them as adults."

He was echoed, at an educational gathering in New York, by Stephen K. Bailey of Syracuse, who said of the current student generation: "The best of them are trying to tell us something."

Bailey put his finger on the connecting link between the disorders, whatever their degree of justification and however widespread they may be on any one campus.

His own generation, he said, had not created all the world's ugliness and injustice but "we have perpetuated much of it, and we have been uncommonly slow to recognize and to ameliorate the most subtle indignities and tyrannies of our culture."

This is the reality that will not go away, despite all the talk about tiny minorities, outrageous demands, irresponsible activities, etc.

A generation is coming of age after an entire lifetime spent in the wealthiest society history has known, in an era of technology so astounding that its agents can reach for the moon and destroy the earth, at the culmination of two centuries of American self-congratulation on democracy and justice and plenty for all.

This is a brilliantly informed generation that sees with youth's harsh clarity how the wealth and the technology of America could make the reality of its life conform far more nearly to its ancient boast.

But it is also a generation that in the black experience, in the long struggle over the Vietnam war, in the disillusionments of politics in 1968 and after, has lost most of its faith in reasoned discourse, orderly debate and established political processes.

Thus, for example, this generation does not find it unreasonable to demand, say, a huge increase in one year in the number of black students at a given university; it is only impatient at protests of administrative difficulties, problems of finding qualified candidates, and various political ramifications.

These excuses are just red-tape and prevarication, as students see it, to avoid the kind of action that might actually achieve social gains.

This is, in short, a generation with little respect for its elders and less patience for those ordinary "facts of life" that men reared in less affluent and knowledgeable times are apt to accept with varying degrees of cynicism or sadness.

It takes little exposure to today's young people to see that there is in them little of the tragic sense of life and not much comprehension of that long history of struggle and failure and renewal that is the story of mankind.

Yet, in their outrage and contempt as well as in their vision, the best of them really are trying to tell us something — that we are not living up to the best that is in us.

If older and sadder persons know that men seldom do, it is still a message that palpably and shamefully has seldom been so true as in today's myopic and controlled America.

'New Reality' On Taiwan

By SPENCER MOOSA

TAIPEI — Chiang Kai-shek still casts longing eyes at the Red Chinese mainland, but most of his 13,600,000 subjects seem to have accepted the "new reality"—life in Formosa is not so bad after all, and getting better.

Girls once jeered by angry mobs for wearing shorts wear mini-skirts now. Men worry about jobs, promotions, business; some play golf and belong to the Elks, Kiwanis and Lions. And the aborigines who once hunted heads now ply small boats on beautiful Sun-Moon Lake and wheedle yen from Japanese tourists.

Chiang, white-haired and 81, has bitter memories of his ouster in 1949 by the mainland Communists. But his closest followers are old, none of the mainland factions have asked him for help and the United States continues to refuse the kind of military support that would help him realize his dream of a mainland invasion.

'Past Is Outdated'

Nationalist China's new younger leaders, among them Chiang's son Ching-kuo, are more concerned with the problems at home—illiteracy, birth control, slum clearance, poverty, agriculture, industry and foreign trade.

"The past is outdated," said Ching-kuo. "We must face realities."

The realities are that Formosa, with less than one-third of one per cent of mainland China's total territory and only two per cent of its population, has no military hope of tackling Mao Tse-tung. And although the Chinese Communists openly covet the island 100 miles off their shores, Peking has done little in the last 20 years except issue a steady stream of threats.

The 13,885-square mile evergreen island is shaped like a tobacco leaf. It derived its name from Portuguese navigators who, on sighting it in 1590, exclaimed: "Ilha Formosa"—Beautiful Isle. Its official Chinese name is Taiwan —Terraced Bay.

A protectorate of the Chinese Empire since 1206, Formosa was ceded by China to Japan after a war between the two countries, and it was a Japanese colony for 50 years. Many older Formosans still speak Japanese, but Mandarin Chinese is regarded as the official language.

President and Mme. Chiang Kai-shek

Formosa reverted to Chinese rule in 1945 following Japan's defeat in the Second World War. Four years later Chiang arrived with 600,000 battered troops, leaving Mao in control of the mainland.

Formosa is protected by the United States under a mutual defence treaty, and Chiang's "mainlanders" maintain tight internal control.

The population consists of 10,100,000 native-born inhabitants, 3,500,000 "mainlanders," Chinese who came to Formosa after 1945, and about 200,000 aborigines who belong to seven tribes, the largest the 90,000-strong Ami.

Most officers in Chiang's army and officials in his government are mainlanders or the sons of mainlanders. Native Formosans are only allowed to hold city and county political offices. This tight political control has embittered segments of the younger population, and many Chinese students who leave to study abroad never return.

If the students are unhappy, businessmen are not. American and Japanese money is pouring into the island, creating an unprecedented industrial boom. New factories are attracted by Formosa's wage pattern.

Chang Yu-mei, a 22-year-old housemaid, earns $20 a month and hopes to "marry an ideal man, preferably rich."

Unemployment and rising population remain two big problems. The population jumped from 8,100,000 in 1952 to 13,600,000 today, and there are an estimated 1,000,000 persons on government or church relief programs.

Free Contraceptives

Health centres provide free contraceptive devices, and note that the birth rate increase, 3.9 per cent in 1959, dropped to 2.5 per cent in 1968.

Illiteracy has been reduced to about 10 per cent and is declining.

The per capita income is $237, second highest in Asia after Japan.

A successful land reform program has almost eliminated tenant farming; 70 per cent of the farmers own land and 20 per cent are part owners. Many crude, mud-and-thatch farmhouses have been replaced by modern brick dwellings and farmers are beginning to buy television sets, radios, refrigerators and motorcycles.

Booming along with the economy is tourism, a good percentage of visitors coming from Japan. They gorge on a fantastic variety of food in Taipei restaurants, haggle with antique dealers over porcelains, relax in numerous spas and resorts or visit Formosa's spectacular scenic attractions.

Formosa has licensed prostitution and Taipei is renowned for its swinging night life of bars, dance halls, coffee houses and "girlie restaurants." Girls are also the featured attraction at a string of hot-spring spas dotted along the foothills of the central mountain chain.

The Rocks Are Floating Out Again for Small Gus

By ART STOTT

The small, saucer-eyed boy we call Gus is visiting us and for a while we can enjoy an Alice-in-Wonderland illogic which breaks the drab monotony of conventional concepts.

Stott

Gus has worked out his own interpretation of things. He rejects the hidebound restrictions of rational conclusions as well as natural laws. In his active mind, such considerations don't count.

He has an engaging explanation of tides which takes into no account whatever the pull of the moon—a phenomenon I have never understood either. With his nose pressed against a picture window I have just cleaned and polished, he gazes at the small islands, joined by the sand stretch to the shore at low tide, but isolated by the rising water.

"Look, Art," he says to me, "the rocks are floating out again."

In a Blind-Men-and-the-Elephant sort of way his attitude toward the incoming sea makes a sort of sense. I could tell him, of course, that the tide ebbs and flows and that the rocks are stationary. But he would automatically want to know how and why and that explanation is beyond me. Anyhow, since someone postulated the proposition that the River of Time isn't a river at all, that Time stands still and we are the river flowing past it, I've been a bit confused on aquatic theory.

Gus has a capacity to divert thought. At an even earlier age, he emerged from a daydream to open a conversation with the words: "When I grow up and are a bird . . ."

It hadn't occurred to me, at that point, that a small boy planned a transmutation to avian form. Yet I find, in an excellent book by David Rhys Williams, the quotation of this catchy uncertainty:

"Once upon a time, I, Chuang Tze, dreamt I was a butterfly, fluttering hither and thither, to all intents and purposes a butterfly. I was conscious only of following my fancies as a butterfly, and was unconscious of my individuality as a man. Suddenly, I awakened, and there I lay, myself again. Now I do not know whether I was then a man dreaming I was a butterfly, or whether I am now a butterfly dreaming I am a man."

I think it extremely doubtful that Gus has read the works of Chuang Tze, or of David Rhys Williams, for that matter. He's still bringing home paper cut-outs and crayon work—not much better than some modern art, either—from pre-primary. Whence, then, the concept implicit in "When I grow up and are a bird . . ."? It's a bit too much for me to assume that this is a transferred recollection of the Icarus—Daedalus story heard in a previous incarnation. He may have encountered Peter Pan in the "cartoowuns" he and his sister watch on television. And it is possible that a whole generation of very small fry is coming along with the assured faith that eventually its members will turn into "Flying Nuns" or the masculine counterpart.

It seems to me, though, that Gus arrives at his conclusions, if they are conclusions, by a process of spontaneous generation. If, as a poet once said, the world is too much with us, the criticism doesn't apply to Gus. His world is largely his own creation. It is bound, not by orthodox rules, but by cheerful whimsies that can ride on sunbeams. While he controls it, there is little need to grow up and become a bird. He has wings of his own. Occasionally they carry him soaring beyond the sight of eyes dulled by age.

But they also take him on a course useful to those who are older. They invite a man to question what he takes for absolute in a world where there are probably no absolutes, where we are too prone to accept what has been said by men who were considered wise and where we trust too much to the physical senses.

The flights Gus makes have a practical value, also. They help you to understand some of the unrealities of politics, like debtless debt. Mr. Bennett would like Gus.

Academics Return to Tories After Lean Diefenbaker Years

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA — In Robert Stanfield's office, on the fourth floor of the Centre Block on Parliament Hill, there is a manila folder bulging with letters from certified intellectuals who want to join his staff.

Westell

This is one significant measure of the reviving fortunes of the Conservative Party under his leadership. During the barren Diefenbaker years, the party was shut out of the academic world.

The doors began to open when Stanfield became leader in 1967, but the intellectuals swung to Pierre Trudeau when he popped up as Liberal leader in 1968.

Now Stanfield is again establishing the contacts through which new thinking will flow into his party, and, into the political life of the country.

Three times in recent months he has spent a private evening at Toronto's York University talking with small groups of academics and young business people assembled to meet him.

The president of Trent University, Tom Symons, who heads a policy advisory committee for the Tories, occasionally brings specialists to Ottawa to spend a few hours briefing Stanfield staff and party spokesmen in the Commons.

When the university year ends in the spring, Stanfield will be able to recruit a director of research and will dip into the manila folder to find a qualified staff—using the budget of $125,000 a year for research provided to the official opposition by the Trudeau government.

The research team of eight or ten people, in addition to current duties of advising Stanfield and the Tory caucus, will be preparing for a national policy conference in the fall.

The Conservative Party's annual meeting next month, although a full national conference, will make only a pretence at discussing policy.

Seven panels are being set up to talk about subjects ranging from civil dissent to fiscal federalism. But the agenda allows them only four hours of discussion time and two hours for a plenary session—hardly as much as is provided for jolly breakfast get-togethers, sociable luncheons and a dinner dance.

The fall meeting fits into the political timetable agreed by Stanfield and his inner-circle of advisers in the bleak aftermath of the June election.

They reasoned they would have to allow the enraptured voters a honeymoon of 18 months with Trudeau before seriously seeking to break up the love affair by going onto the partisan offensive.

The period since the June election has been—and continues to be—difficult for Stanfield. He has to maintain a political presence in the shadow of Trudeau without becoming a nagging bore, and without over exposing himself to the public to the point where familiarity would invite contempt.

The consensus on Parliament Hill is that he is doing remarkably well and is establishing a national image which, if not exciting, is comfortable and credible.

He has greatly improved his parliamentary style and is capable, on occasion, of delivering a first rate speech, in a house which has few orators and a prime minister whose set-piece statements are crashingly dull.

Personal feelings, also, can lend a cutting edge to Stanfield's tongue. He is particularly effective in attacking Finance Minister Edgar Benson, for whom he harbors a deep dislike which is said to have originated in some unexplained incident at a Rideau Hall reception.

Outside the Commons, Stanfield is more articulate than he was in responding to the TV cameras which try daily for a reply of the question period inside the chamber.

Constitutional reform is a delicate subject for Stanfield and the Tories. He took over the leadership from John Diefenbaker when a substantial section of the party—including a majority in the parliamentary caucus — was committed to a hard line against Quebec aspirations.

With courage and skill, he helped to swing the party to a conciliatory position which effectively shut the bigots out of the election in June.

Had Stanfield done well in the election, that would have been the end of the battle. But he could not claim a victory for his ideas and for his accommodating attitude, and the angry voices are again beginning to be heard in the party.

The constitutional conference brought to the surface old fears about bilingualism, and bigot mail to MPs is rising.

Stanfield can probably keep the lid on this rumbling, but it does not leave him much freedom to make constitutional policy.

It explains also why he was so angry recently when Trudeau, foolishly, needled him about constitutional policy in the Commons, Stanfield felt he was fighting to keep his own party in a non-partisan position to permit constructive debate, while the prime minister was seeking to score cheap party points.

THANKS (IN PART) TO SPECIALIZED CELLS—IS RICH INDEED. HERE'S WHY

We've been talking to you about cells. There are countless specialized cells with specialized functions. In man, some of these cells achieve reaction over a broad range. In lower animals the range is less broad.

You see things in "full color". Dogs, cattle, horses, and most other mammals (animals that feed their young with milk from the mother's mammary glands) see in shades of grey only. Only monkeys and apes share man's "technicolor" vision.

However, some creatures have cells far more efficient in the narrow range they encompass. The hawk you see soaring so "casually" is probably watching for a field mouse. Despite his greyed vision, he can see the mouse at least 8 times as far away as you can.

In your hand you can feel the warmth of the body of a small creature.

A rattlesnake knows when such a creature comes near because it has cells in its head that feel the body warmth over a distance of several feet!

Man's specialized "warning" cells are remarkable too. If you touch something very soft, cells that specialize in reporting softness, signal your brain.

If you press something hard, are pricked sharply, or touch something hot, other specialist cells report! When you are ill, a doctor's diagnosis is important. For he knows better than you, what the "signals" mean from many specialized cells in your body. And when your doctor prescribes for you, we would like to fill your prescriptions. That is our specialty. We take it seriously.

Victoria Fair: Big Chance To Work for Fine Harvest

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

The University of Victoria's plans to inaugurate a major type festival in the city this summer did not exactly take some of us by surprise.

Talks have been going on concerning the project since last fall. But it is good to know that plans have reached the stage where an announcement is possible.

Johnson

Those of you who have read this column on and off for at least the last 15 years, know that I have been a consistent advocate of this type of project.

It is still my conviction that successful establishment of a major arts festival could be a matter of prime importance to the whole city.

The cab driver who told me that every man, woman and child in Stratford had benefitted through their festival wasn't kidding. And he was not talking through the top of his head either.

The facts are a matter of record and they endorse his enthusiasm.

VISION SHARED

University theatre division head, Dr. Ralph Allen, shares with School of Fine Arts director Peter Garvie a vision of Victoria as the Stratford of Western Canada.

With the potential and expertise at present available—and providing the balance of funds required can be lured from hiding—there is every possibility of the vision becoming reality.

Only one big question mark hovers in my mind. I have yet to be shown that we have in this city, people with the courage, faith and ambition that inspired the businessmen of Stratford when they jumped on Tom Patterson's bandwagon.

Dr. Allen sees this six-week venture — which avoids the word "festival" by going under the title, Victoria Fair—as a good, substantial pilot run for what will be a national scale event in the summer of 1970.

FINE PLAYS

The core of the event is to be a repertory season of fine plays at McPherson Playhouse, performed by a company built on a nucleus of professional actors.

Opening the season on July 14, will be Dr. Allen's production of Hamlet, probably starring as the Prince of Denmark a young Canadian actor whose work at Stratford last summer won the highest commendation from all critics.

Christopher Newton who was seen in the televised Henry V as Gloucester, is now artistic director of Theatre Calgary, the professional company that has grown out of Mac 14.

Bernard Engel, head of the acting program at the University of Alberta and an actor who played the lead in the first production of J. B. in Brussells, and Richard Galuppi who starred in Measure for Measure last fall, will be members of the company.

Carl Hare, Anthony Jenkins and Harriet Allen are among the top local actors involved.

Sets for all three productions—the other two are Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice and Moliere's Tartuffe—will be by Robert Cothran, who came to Uvic last fall from Pittsburgh Playhouse.

Within the five months since he started working here he has produced two superb settings—for Measure for Measure and Playboy of the Western World.

Sounding Board

Allan Granstrom, Uvic's new miracle-working costume designer who came to the campus from the Seattle Repertory Theatre, has begun sketches and has completed a stunning set of designs for Tartuffe which is to have a spring preview showing of three performances at the McPherson in March.

Music events coming under the Victoria Fair title will be mainly on-campus and will include 12 recitals and chamber music concerts during July.

Among visiting artists will be a brilliant young English pianist, David Wilde, winner of the Bartok-Liszt competition in Budapest and a frequent performer at the Edinburgh Festival, and Bernard Rose, a prominent English harpsichordist and organist.

The third chamber music workshop will be extended to two weeks with an international faculty of musicians.

Uvic has not moved into the undertaking often discussed pro and con by organizations such as the Victoria Community Arts Council and by cultural leaders such as Laszlo Gati, without long consultations with those most likely to be affected.

But while neither Bastion Theatre nor the Symphony Society could fit their own plans into the University's concept this year, Mr. Garvie and Dr. Allen both express the hope that these organizations will find it possible to participate in the seasons to come.

WORK FOR ALL

The future could indeed be good, but only if citizens — and I mean from City Hall outward — do not sit smugly on the sidelines with an attitude of "let the university do it."

Victoria — and again I emphasize, starting with City Hall — will be only too glad to benefit from the harvest.

But everyone who would like to see a fine harvest must be prepared to do his share in providing the sinew and resources to make it come to pass.

The university, often criticized for staying locked within its ivory tower, is stepping forth into the community with Victoria Fair.

That it desires the community to be a partner in the enterprise has been made clear.

So now it's up to the citizens and the representatives of the citizens to do their part in the best way open to them, even if it's nothing more than scraping away the customary apathy and doing a little enthusiastic promoting.

PRESENTING poetry recital Monday at the University of Victoria is well-known French actor Pierre Viala. Annual presentation will be in room 112 of the Cornett Building at 12:30 p.m.

Outsiders Boost Festival Entry

Despite bad weather and prevalent flu bugs at the period of entry-deadline, Greater Victoria Music Festival has totalled about the same number of entries as last year.

This year's festival takes place from April 14-25, with the highlights concerts scheduled for Saturday, April 26.

Biggest increase is in school choral classes, covering both junior and senior levels, where 78 entries forecast that close to 4,000 children will be involved in this section alone.

More out-of-town entries have been received this year, including some from North Vancouver and several Island centres.

Piano entries are still most numerous while adult vocal entries remain one of the festival low points.

Guitar and organ entries have upped slightly but in a new class for pop groups there is only one entry.

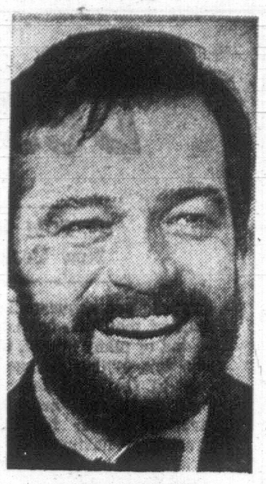
A new policy will see the top level Rose Bowl and City Medallion competitions take place Friday night, eliminating all contests at the festival highlights concert.

Irish Troupe Coming

A little early for St. Patrick's Day but nevertheless welcome to lovers of Irish music and humor, The Sound of Ireland comes to the Royal Theatre March 4.

Included in the touring company will be The Blarney Folk, a quintet of ballad singers entitled The Glensmen, and the Seven Towers Dancers performing a repertoire of jigs, reels and hornpipes.

Master of ceremonies will be Jimmy Kennedy, a renowned teller of "Murphy" tales.



A BEARDED GOULET? Only temporarily, fans. Singer Robert Goulet hasn't bowed to the beard craze. The facial adornment is a concession to the needs of his role in forthcoming movie "Underground." He's just opened at the Waldorf.

New Slant Given Bach Favorites By Organist

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Bach Organ Favorites, Vol. 3 MS 7108. E. Power Biggs.

Music of Jubilee. Bach favorites for Organ and Orchestra. ML 6015.

E. Power Biggs has sold more organ records than all other organists combined and nine out of ten organ-fanciers questioned admitted that their record-cabinets contain his recordings.

Like an experienced vintner, Biggs combines deep understanding of the product and a wide experience of the market to which it is directed, with his own dash of sparkling genius, to produce organ records which, while not too dry for the average consumer, are never so sweetened or watered-down as to offend those of discerning taste.

Diamond In the Groove

Both these records contain only well-known Bach favorites, yet each gives a new slant to the enjoyment of the familiar music.

Bach Organ Favorites Vol. 3 contains three Preludes and Fugues and the six Schubler Preludes, and is played on Biggs' favorite Flentrop tracker organ in the Busch-Reisinger Museum in Cambridge, Mass., where he lives.

This well-voiced small organ is so sweet-sounding that it does not offend even non-organ-inclined ears.

The three Preludes and Fugues are very different in style. The first, Arnstadt in C Minor, typifies the pedal-happy, sound-compounding younger organist.

Its light, rhythmic Fugue, in striking contrast, contains a suggestion of stealthy, mischievous prowling and possesses immediate appeal.

The thoughtful, meditative Prelude in D Minor sets off its Fugue (Fiddle), which, being transcribed from a violin sonata, contains echo effects and florid passages.

The most popular, Cathedral Prelude and Fugue in E Minor has the satisfying grandeur and stateliness of a maturer inspiration.

Of the Six Schubler Preludes, the first, the most often played Wachet Auf, lilts along with delicate stops contrasting the darker-toned chorale melody, and the occasional tasteful trills add to its effectiveness.

The fourth, My Soul Doth Magnify the Lord, the gentlest and most sacred of the set evokes associations with the ancient tonus peregrinus; and the sixth, Comest Thou Now Jesus, is charming in its fluttery gracefulness.

By combining the organ with orchestral instruments, particularly complementary brass, Mr. Biggs has extended its appeal.

Music of Jubilee which involves the Columbia Symphony Orchestra is one of the most joyful organ records ever issued.

All the music on it was composed for festive occasions, Christmas, Easter, the reappearance of spring after the dark winter, a birthday greeting and a cantata congratulating a Professor of Law on his installation.

Many of the chorales are familiar as strong Teutonic hymn-tunes, and the brass embellishments, soaring descants and heroic fanfares add to their majestic breadth as a gilt edge sets off fine paper.

Now Thank We All Our God, Ah Dearest Jesu, and Now Christ Doth End in Triumph, all benefit from brazen embellishments while a solo trumpet brings out the chorale line in Jesu Joy.

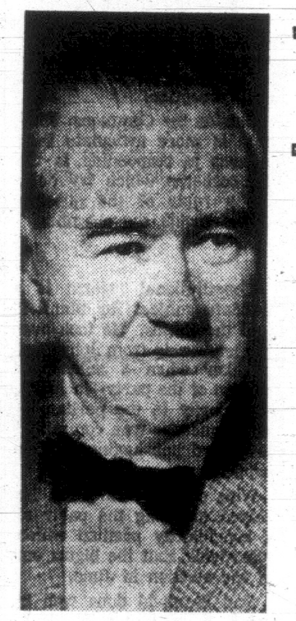
On the reverse side, My Spirit Be Joyful (which Mr. Biggs is playing in Victoria in 10 days' time) features two trumpets in lively canon.

The instrumental trio from the Birthday Cantata, adds a light pastoral touch and the horn obligato and smooth strings in Wachet Auf, and the sombre oboe d'amore and piping flutes in Sheep May Safely Graze, give a new listening slant to familiar works.

The five hymn-tunes grouped as Concerted Chorales are not all equally successful.

While the beloved hymn-tune Praise to the Lord, and The Doxology, are improved by the addition of trumpets and drums, What God Wills has rather a Sally-Ann-Band connotation, and the magnificence of Martin Luther's A Mighty Fortress is diminished by the thin timbre of the sounds which surround its great melody.

The final band on the record contains a section of the secular Cantata No. 207, which has an air of academic procession and contains echo effects at the end of each line and a snarling trumpet finale.



BEST KNOWN organ recitalist in the English-speaking world, E. Power Biggs will appear in recital at Christ Church Cathedral on March 4. The notable virtuoso and recording artist, who has been honored in world capitals, will perform a number of the great works he has helped to make familiar through the medium of his numerous records. Assisting Mr. Biggs will be trumpeters David Fisher and Garvin Bruner and percussionist Fergus Heywood. Tickets are on sale at Western Music, Fort Street.

Concert Honors Saint

An organ recital and choir concert honoring the patron saint of Wales will be presented Friday at 8 p.m. in the church of St. David-by-the-Sea, Cordova Bay.

A former organist of St. David's, Herman Bergink, will be the recitalist. The Victoria-built pipe organ has recently been enlarged by Hugo Spilker, who has added a row of bass pipes, giving the instrument a deeper, richer tone.

Welsh songs will be sung by the church choirs.

Why Lingers My Gaze, a traditional song, Bach's Rejoice Ye Pure in Heart, and Healey Willan's Make a Joyful Noise will be sung by the adult choir.

Gwynn Williams' The Gypsy and De Vries' As Long as Men Are Living will be performed by the boys' choir. Both groups are under the direction of Connie Broadhurst.

The girls' choir, directed by Beatrice M. Walker, will sing The Bells of Cantre'-Gwaelad and a modern folk song, Lord of the Dance.

A collection will be taken and refreshments will be served following the concert.

Tuesday, March 4, 8 p.m., Christ Church Cathedral: World famous organist E. Power Biggs in recital. Tickets on sale at Western Music, Fort Street.

The Book Page

Edited by Joan Coldwell

HOW DOES A HORSE which came out of the sea and whose mane is like seaweed tie in with a book called The Scarecrow? Written by Caroline Rush (Macmillan, $2.75), the book tells of a farmer making a scarecrow out of odds and ends and eventually learning from an old mouse the stories behind the hat, the straw, the potato head, the gloves, coat, trousers and boots. There is something magical—like the seahorse, which by the way is connected with the hat—in each of the stories, which are just the right length for bedtime reading for five to eight-year-olds.

An Incisive Story of Love Is Told

MAYO: THE STORY OF MY FAMILY AND MY CAREER by Dr. Charles Mayo. Doubleday, 351 pp., $8.50.

Reviewed by Grant McOrmond

. . . started on a puppy

The autobiography of Dr. Charles Mayo is in part a love story, for it tells of the love of Dr. Mayo both for his wife Alice and for his profession of surgery.

It is also the story of the Mayo family and of the Mayo Clinic, for the author was the son of Dr. C. H. Mayo and the nephew of Dr. W. J. Mayo, the co-founders of the Clinic at Rochester, Minnesota.

According to Charles Mayo, the first evidence of his infatuation for surgery manifest itself when he was about nine or 10 years old. Assisted by his brother Joe, he performed an operation on a puppy for a large umbilical hernia. Much to the amazement of all concerned, the puppy lived.

The doctor's romance with his wife Alice did not start until much later in life. While at Princeton he fell in love with the actress Marilyn Miller. It was a romance of some duration, but finally it was filed away with his other college escapades, such as being arrested in a raid on a speak-easy in Philadelphia and giving a false name to the police. When his friends came to have him released he could not remember the name under which he was booked.

For most people, however, the chief interest of Mayo will be found in the account given of the origin and development of the clinic.

'Like Coring an Apple'

The Mayo brothers arranged matters in such a way that they and their families had no continuing financial or administrative control over the clinic. Dr. Charles Mayo was the last member of the family to be associated with it. His son, a highly trained and expert surgeon was not accepted by the Board of Governors as a member of the staff and is now practising in Minneapolis.

Interspersed with the family history and anecdotes are descriptions of interesting cases and difficult surgery. Some readers may be unable to appreciate Dr. Mayo's specialty, proctology, or surgery of the rectum, usually occasioned by cancer of the colon.

The final stage of the operation is described concisely, in vivid detail: "I then removed the anus, like coring an apple."

One old farmer was delighted with his colostomy, explaining, "Now when I go to the state fair, I don't have to go to the toilet."

Dr. Mayo, however, does not seek to make light of suffering, nor does he display any callousness or detachment regarding the surgery he performed. He tried to envision what he as a patient would want in a doctor, and then he tried to be that kind of a man.

In training other doctors, he explains, "Commitment to the patient's welfare was the principal quality I sought in my assistants, and after that, of course, expertise."

Drink Plenty of Water

Readers looking for a little free medical advice will not be disappointed. Dr. Mayo stresses the importance of drinking plenty of water; this is particularly important in the avoidance of stomach ulcers. It is also a useful measure to ward off hangovers. He also has a number of interesting things to say about the use of oxygen and of vitamin pills, as well as about the whole process of digestion and elimination.

Dr. Mayo retired in 1964. Long before his retirement, and in the years that followed, he was active in a great many national and international organizations. He organized and directed a volunteer group that operated a hospital in New Guinea during the Second World War. He was the American representative to the United Nations in 1953 and answered the Communist charge that America was engaging in germ warfare in Korea. His speech was acclaimed throughout the free world. He later went on to serve with the World Health Organization and acted as President Eisenhower's personal representative at the coronation of the King of Nepal.

The autobiography of Dr. Charles Mayo is interesting, informative, and entertaining. It gives readers a picture of a man not only skilled in his profession, but educated in the truest sense of the word.

Indeed, Ruskin's view of education he seems to have made his own: "The entire object of true education is to make people not merely do the right thing but enjoy the right things — not merely industrious, but to love industry — not merely learned, but to love knowledge — not merely pure, but to love purity — not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice."

Vagaries of Creativity Within the Bathtub Ring

FACTS AND FICTIONS, By Ann Bridge; Clarke, Irwin, and Co.; $6.00.

JOURNEY INTO THE MIND'S EYE, by Lesley Blanch; Collins; $7.25.

Reviewed by Donna Smyth

The relationship between an artist's works and his life is always curious, frequently entertaining, and sometimes enlightening. The vagaries of the creative process and the idiosyncrasies of the man or the woman, the elegant rhetorical gesture and the ring around the bathtub, all provide a twilight zone of intricate interaction which perpetually fascinates both the literary critic and Mrs. Johnson who only has time to read, my dear, when she is at the hairdresser's.

Both Lesley Blanch and Ann Bridge profess an interest in this particular zone but both also reject the label "autobiography," preferring to relate their lives to their writing in some area combining reality and fiction. From this common starting point, however, their books proceed in widely divergent manners.

SHEER PHYSICAL VIGOR

Ann Bridge's Facts and Fictions will interest her fans and bore those who have never heard of her. It traces the period of her life, from 1911 to the late 50's, when her husband was a British diplomat appointed to such exotic places as Peking and Lisbon. Miss Bridge's activities range from curing hams and raising children in the English countryside to touring Turkey in search of material for a book on Mustata Kemal Ataturk's revolution. She compels the reader's admiration for her sheer physical vigor as she gradually reveals herself to be one of those calm Englishwomen able to cope in absolutely any situation without, or so it appears, any of the usual human hesitations, doubts, or even much of a sense of humor.

Her comments on creativity are largely limited to noting that a certain locale served as background for a particular novel. She is more concerned with historical veracity than atmosphere, anecdote, or tone and the result is a strangely bland, impersonal account of what must have been an exciting life.

In extreme contrast, Lesley Blanch is a romantic figure belonging more to the extravagant yearnings of the late nineteenth century than to the clinical passions of the twentieth. Her book is the story of a childhood fantasy which becomes an adult obsession. The fantasy begins with the nursery tales of a romantic Russian, nostalgic for his homeland, steeped in Russian legend and history, and quite willing to enchant a wide-eyed little English girl who refers to him only as the Traveller. As the little girl grows up, the fantasies continue until a shared illusion becomes a shared passion celebrated aboard a train from Paris to Dijon because the fabulous Trans-Siberian railway, symbol of their love, is inaccessible.

The affair lasts for a few years as the mysterious Traveller appears and disappears and the girl becomes a woman obsessed with the spirit and history of Russia before the revolution. Then, the Traveller is seen no more. The woman is left to pursue the illusion amid the reality of a Russia that is trying to forget its past. It is a charming, absurd love story as well as a tribute to sprawling, contradictory Mother Russia. For connoisseurs of autobiography, the spirit is that of Marie Bashkirtsev, as are the occasional silly, sentimental lapses.

Neither book offers a profound insight into the creative process or, for that matter, anything else. Lesley Blanch, however, has the dramatic flair required to present herself as an appealing person and writer, while Ann Bridge remains undramatized, eminently sensible, and quite dull.

Victoria's Fairyland Described

British Columbia's totem poles, Butchart Gardens, Ralph Edwards and Ma Murray are featured in Canada: This Land, These People, an illustrated 332-page hardcover book just out from Reader's Digest of Canada.

It's a colllection of 57 of the Canadian stories the Digest has carried in the past half century, an anthology that attempts to reflect the color and sweep of Canada's history and its exciting present — and to give lie to the weary argument that Canada produces no heroes.

Ralph Edwards is a hero if there ever was one. His story is a condensation of Leland Stowe's book Crusoe of Lonesome Lake — the extraordinary account of Edwards wresting home from the British Columbia wilderness.

'JUST TOLD THINGS'

The story of Ma Murray, the newspaper woman who "couldn't write a hang but just told things"—and became a sort of national resource — is recounted by her daughter, Georgina M. Keddell.

Mrs. Murray, running her Bridge River-Lillooet News, was well on in her 80s when she told a high school graduating class: "Remember this, kids. Nobody owes you a thing. You have had 12 years of living, loving and learning which have cost your parents and the taxpayers a lot of dough. Now grab every minute as if it were your last, for it's a damshur if you don't accomplish for yourselves, nobody else will."

Jenny Butchart's Garden of Wonders near Victoria is discovered for Canadian readers in David MacDonald's fine story of this fairyland created from an ugly quarry. Seven color photographs — seven of nearly 400 photos in the book — accompany this description of a prime west coast tourist attraction.

Another top B.C. attraction, totem poles, are described in an article by Jean Melancon as true masterpieces: "Canadian artists," he writes, "need not, as Picasso did, study primitive art in West Africa. They can find inspiration in an esthetic form which is part and parcel of their national inheritance."

It's a Cheap, Nasty Comedy For Beery Belly-Laughs

I WANT IT NOW, by Kingsley Amis. Clarke, Irwin and Co. 255 pp. $4.50.

Reviewed by Anthony Jenkins

Like its title, Mr. Amis' latest novel is cheap and nasty. Although they are written along a fairly well-trodden path, its first chapters can be considered seriously as a satire on the swinging mores of contemporary London, but then the book changes direction and it becomes hard to see just where the author stands.

Ronnie Appleyard, who begins the book as a typically Amis-like anti-hero, is a slick operator, an ambitious and none-too-scrupulous TV interviewer, one of the kings of Britain's new youthful elite. He is determined to succeed, and not at all choosey how he gets to the top.

At a party, Ronnie bumps into Simon Quick, a gangling and enigmatic creature, and for an instant he's not sure whether he's faced with a girl or a boy. Their conversation soon makes it clear that Simon is in fact a girl, and their later escapades make it pretty obvious that the girl is a frigid nymphomaniac and rich to boot. It's the bank account that attracts Ronnie, and for a chance at that he's willing to put up with Miss Quick's other quirks: "Ronnie considered reprimanding himself for not having pieced together the names of Quick and Chummy . . . but, on an evening when the future seemed to lie bathed in the radiance of an immense dollar-sign, he could not find it in his heart to do so."

Up to that point, the novel reads like a sexier version of Room at the Top, but we're then asked to believe that Ronnie realizes how lonely and frustrated Simon is, and that he determines to rescue her by his patience and his sexual expertise. The heartless interviewer is converted and becomes the victim of Simon's atrocious mother. The book thus becomes blurred. The self-seeking anti-hero turns into a sentimental hero in quest of his sleeping beauty.

'SEX IS DIRTY JOKE'

Mr. Amis' forte has always been for climactic scenes of comic revenge. His heroes get their comeuppance — or their own back — at moments of wild but public disaster. When Ronnie gets thrown out of parties or humiliates his enemies in a TV interview, Amis is on home territory. But when he tries to show the gradual house-training of a nymphet, he treads as delicately as a baby elephant.

His comedy is that of undergraduate rag-week not the phsychoanalyst's couch.

Mr. Amis is further hampered by his adolescent attitude to sex. For him, sex is either an athletic romp or a dirty joke, to be associated with beery belly-laughs, masculine prowess and calendar-girl thighs. It is depressing to see the barbs he flings at the glossy London of the copywriters being continually deflected by the ambiguity of his outlook. Mr. Amis is more than half inside the world that he is condemning.

And the ambiguity is increased by the fuzziness of his style. He goes for the slick — but obvious — turn of phrase; his dialogue is terrible and his syntax misleading and shaky. In fact, the whole book is ill-considered. The Amis raffishness, which was once so jaunty, has now taken a decidedly unpleasant turn.

A Fine Summing-Up Of Modern Drama

DRAMA FROM IBSEN TO BRECHT, by Raymond Williams; Clarke, Irwin and Co. Ltd.; $7.20.

Fifteen years ago Mr. Williams, Fellow of Jesus College, Cambridge, published Drama from Ibsen to Eliot, a plea for the reconsideration of theatre concentrating on naturalism. In this greatly expanded edition he has brought his study up to date, significantly re-arranging and in some cases revising his earlier comments.

New essays have been added on Lorca, Buchner, O'Neill, Joyce, Giradoux, Miller; some playwrights (O'Casey, D. H. Lawrence) have been elevated from notes to titled treatment; others (the Faber dramatists) have been quietly dropped.

The author has had the opportunity to change his mind about some plays and some playwrights, and to view the entire century from a new perspective as he takes into account the experiments of recent dramatists. His lengthy conclusion on the theory and practice of modern drama is perhaps the finest summing up yet published.—A. S.

He's More Fit For Dear Abby

THE HUSBAND by Sol Stein. Coward-McCann 6.95.

Reviewed by Gillian Thomas

Situations that provide good material for Abigail Van Buren's column do not necessarily make good novels. The hero of Sol Stein's novel could well have signed his letter to Abby, "Feels Guilty in New York."

His problem basically is that he is bored with his marriage and worried about the onset of middle age. He has an affair with a girl who works at the office; decides he wants to divorce his wife, but is unwilling to sever the ties with his children.

After 250 pages of the novel, Stein's hero Peter Carmody resolves his problem by deciding that the only workable relationship is that between two people only. Thus the children become superfluous.

During these 250 pages he has also discovered some of the sexual vices of his colleagues, friends and acquaintances. He feels some degree of mild moral outrage at the decadence and corruption of the rest of the world and decides that, after all, at least by comparison, he is a rather virtuous character.

As far as the reader is concerned, however, this is by no means satisfactory. In his behavior throughout the novel, Peter is distinctly inept at continuing any kind of two-person relationship, so a resolution in these terms is simply not believable.

Similarly the idea that a man in his late 40s suddenly discovers that other people sometimes lead illicit sex lives seems so naive that it becomes incredible.

Abigail Van Buren, in her wisdom, would have given Peter short shrift. Mr. Stein's wisdom in devoting a full-length novel to him seems somewhat questionable.

Poetic Current Fizzles Outward

THE POWER OF THE DOG, by Rona Murray, Morris Printing Co. Victoria, B.C. Hardback $6.50; Paperback $3.75.

Reviewed by Gladys Downes

MURRAY
. . . leaves magic circle

Rona Murray's successful first book, "The Enchanted Adder, was the expression of a personal landscape which seemed to exist within a closed magic circle suggested by the coiled snake of the title.

Readers will remember her ability to create valid personal myths, and to use, with skill and force, the rich resources of the English language to evoke them.

The myths are still in evidence. They seem even more powerful than before in the poems where they occur, such as Doppelganger, Three Voices, and The Old King in Hades.

But the poet has moved out of the closed universe of personal sensibility. The circle has been broken. The interior landscape has become in part an exterior one, a landscape where other people are walking. Now there are poems about other people, dedicated to other people, addressed to other people.

TENSION SLACKENS

This shift in the centre of poetic gravity makes for a certain slackening of tension in a volume which is more fragmented than The Enchanted Adder, I find a parallel fragmentation of sensibility in some of the poems, such as Cattle Market, whose flashing images are only just held together by the evocative rhythms:

"And what young calf lies cold aground without his peacock shroud around?"

It would be wrong, incidentally, to take this quotation as typical of Rona Murray's use of rhythm. Each poem finds its own free (subtly free) form, and there are haunting lines such as:

"The empty space
inside the O
of the mouth
and inside other orifices
of flesh we carry delicately balanced on bones hatched out of the giant's white
oven"

The volume does suffer from a lack of strict editing. I can see no valid reason to call three short poems by the same title, unless they are presented as part of a series. There are weak endings which should have been worked over longer.

And the poet has a tendency to allow expressions to creep in which do not really carry the poetic current, which allow it to slacken. But one makes these comments simply because the best is so very good, and one hopes Rona Murray will continue speaking in her own particular voice.

Others Would Love Recital Series

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Orange juice is bracketed with Schubert, Mozart and Beethoven as elements in his life that James Dick would hate to have removed.

He was commenting on an obvious type question I had said I wouldn't ask — about favorite composers.

"As a matter of fact," says the pianist who will be guest artist with Victoria Symphony Orchestra this weekend, "I find my greatest challenge in the music of Schubert, Mozart and Beethoven. If for any reason I couldn't have their music in my repertoire it would be a serious lack — like going without orange juice for breakfast."

At 27, Mr. Dick is already considered one of the leading young American pianists and is well under way on a Sol Hurok-managed career.

He has a schedule of 90 concerts this year — "A bit too much" he feels.

Wednesday night he gave a recital at McPherson Playhouse and included in his program was Schubert's "Wanderer" Fantasie.

The recitals by Symphony soloists, instituted last season by music director Laszlo Gati, provide, he agrees, a splendid opportunity to hear the artists in a wider spectrum than the single concerto performance offers.

"It is extremely unique. Only a few cities all over the world — Brussels is one — have such an excellent arrangement," he comments.

Mr. Dick thinks it a great pity that only a percentage of Victoria music lovers have purchased the series "when there are so many cities all over the continent that would like to have something of the sort."

Too often there is no one around with the imagination and initiative and no organization such as Victoria Symphony Society with the courage to get it going, he says.

Some artists are split between their desire to teach and their pleasure in performance.

Some, like Glenn Gould, abandon concertizing early for the greater seclusion and "close-to-the-chest" satisfactions of the recording studio and composer's desk.

For James Dick, his rapidly developing concert career looks like being his life's work, for he is temperamentally perfectly tailored for it.

He appears well adjusted and completly poised and relaxed as to personality.

Musically, when you talk to him, you discover that he combines an earnest, sincere approach with exactly the right balance between assurance and humility.

An ideal blend of qualities for the concert artist. On top of which he really enjoys travelling.

"It is necessary for the concert artist to develop a philosophy," he says. "Not every performance can be all one wishes; there are so many factors involved — there are times when one can only hope that communication between one's audience and oneself will be established at least a good part of the time."

But when I agreed that it is unfair to expect an artist to be so different from the rest of mankind as to be always in the mood, he hastened to add a qualification.

"You may be tired, or not feeling just right physically, but you have to school yourself to rise to the challenge of that moment when you appear before an audience.

"In fact, with most performers, when they sit down to, or take up an instrument or begin to project in the case of singing, something happens."

And it is this partly intuitive, partly trained ability to "turn on" that the artist can depend on to overcome disturbing factors, he explains.

As for teaching, James Dick has enjoyed teaching since he was a small child.

But he believes that for a concert artist to be also a teacher is unfair to the students.

"When you are away from them for several months of the year you simply cannot give them what they need and have a right to expect," he says.

Mr. Dick, a top finalist in the Busoni (Italy), Leventritt (New York) and Tchaikowsky (Moscow) competitions, blows a cool breath over the heated press acclamations that greeted his triple feat two years ago.

"It doesn't necessarily mean all that much," he says.

"According to records, major competition winners have not by any means always followed through to successful careers."

At present Mr. Dick has a home in Austin, Texas, where, during his brief sojourns, he enjoys his hobbies of reading, walking and swimming — "It's a pretty place, not too big, nice people and a very good university."

He has never "succumbed to the syndrome of New York City," he says. But he loves London where he studied for two years with Clifford Curzon at the Royal Academy.

"If I were going to live in a big city I'd choose London. In fact I hope to have a home there one day," says James Dick.

Victorian's Composition Featured

A feature of Sunday and Monday's Victoria Symphony program will be the performance of a composition by former Victorian John Beckwith.

Fall Scene and Fair Dance is a work scored for string orchestra with solo violin and flute. It was written in 1956.

Currently Mr. Beckwith is a professor of music at the University of Toronto and is active in producing programs of contemporary music on the CBC radio network.

Born in Victoria, the son of the late Harold Beckwith, at one time a noted lawyer in this city, the composer studied at the Royal Conservatory in Toronto, later going to Paris where he continued his studies under the famed Nadia Boulanger.

His compositions are wide in scope and prolific, including pieces for piano, songs, chamber music, choral music, symphonic and chamber opera works and incidental music for radio.

His mother, Mrs. H. A. Beckwith, still resides in Victoria.

KERR
. . . Britain next

The seven entries for the Dominion Drama Festival Regional Finals, being held at McPherson Playhouse March 16-22, will have shrunk to six when pre-adjudication by Tom Kerr is completed next week.

Mr. Kerr has long been involved in the theatre and has been the dynamic director of many fine productions by the North Kamloops group which have reached the National finals.

He is currently active in a bold plan to take a young group of Canadian actors and a Canadian play to Britian in the near future.

FINALS IN KELOWNA

A winner from among the six three-act plays to be seen here, representing British Columbia, will become eligible to be chosen for the Western zone to go to the national finals which will be held this year in Kelowna, May 19-24.

The Western zone includes Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba as well as B.C.

Public adjudications will be made each night following performances at the McPherson.

Adjudicator for the Western region is Dennis Sweeting, a native of Calgary and well known on this coast.

Mr. Sweeting was a CBC staff announcer in B.C. prior to his appointment as administrator for the Association of Canadian Radio and TV Artists in 1954.

He was instrumental in setting up Actors Equity Association in Canada.

His theatrical credits include seasons as general manager for the Canadian Players, actor in sustaining parts in the CBC-TV series, Quentin Durgens and Wojeck and as the Lion Tamer in the bilingual children's show, Dandy Lion and Le Lion Distingue.

Directorial credits include Charley's Aunt and The Caucasian Chalk Circle.

Previously he has adjudicated for the DDF, New York State University Drama Festival and Simpson's Collegiate Drama Festival. His current project is directing a bilingual production of Puss in Boots to tour in Ontario.

This year a Pot of Gold has been established by the British Columbia DDF Committee, providing cash awards for the winning groups to help with their expenses.

A purely provincial effort, donations will be welcome, however small. Names of donors will be added to the list of "Patrons of B.C. Theatre" published in the programs.

Donations may be sent to the Festival Secretary, DDF, B.C. Region, 2816 Seaview Road, Victoria. Cheques should be made out to the Dominion Drama Festival, B.C. Region.

The box office opens March 3 at McPherson Playhouse for advance sale of tickets priced from $1 to $2.50.

Hockey Sold to U.S. As Football on Ice

By AL FORREST

For the American male it's a long, long time between football seasons.

So U.S. networks are trying to bridge the gap by presenting a new sport called football on skates.

Canadians call it hockey.

But listening to the U.S. commentators it's difficult to recognize the game.

Almost all the talk is about penalties, fights and body-slamming. The score is incidental.

While Canadian fans cheer the clever passing attack, the American fan is urged to watch for a forward to try to split the defence (there's lots of heavy hitting although the forward almost inevitably loses the puck).

Another aspect of the game that causes the American announcer's pulse to throb is the body-checking in front of the goal.

"Watch big Whatzisname take out John Whozit, fans. Bang! There he goes! This is a real he-man's game. Oh, the puck's in the net. Let's try to pick up that score on the instant replay and we can watch again as Whozit is knocked on his shin pads."

Yes, it's a man's game but there's more to hockey than ramming through the defence for a touchdown.

This week the sport academy awards gave the Emmy and Oscar shows a few lessons in pace and entertainment.

The names of the nominees were announced followed by brief film clips of each athlete in action and then, with no further ado, announcement of the winner.

There was no long wait for somebody to say: "The envelope, please."

Have you ever thought of locking yourself in your room with five rented TV sets and turning them all on at once?

Manhattan publishing executive Charles Sopkin tried it for seven days and nights . . . and survived to tell about it.

This Week In TV

He turned the experience into a 286-page book (Seven Glorious Days, Seven Fun-Filled Nights, Musson Book Company, Don Mills, Ontario. $7.25).

How he avoided turning into a raving maniac is one of the mysteries of our time.

Perhaps he just turned into a blithering idiot. At least that's the suspicion when you come to his conclusion. After criticizing and decrying TV fare for page after page he concludes that television really isn't so bad after all.

TV viewers, he says, get what they deserve.

If they don't like a program, they should switch to a different channel, says he.

Yes, Mr. Sopkin, but which channel?

Comedy Cafe after the Saturday night hockey game is heavy-handed humor but difficult to resist. There is so little genuine Canadian satire that it's welcome even if a bit crude.

In a recent sketch, a satirical news announcer intoned:

"A reporter has been discovered in the bedroom of Prime Minister Trudeau. When questioned about it, the reporter claimed to be trying to refute the prime minister's declaration that the press had no business in the bedrooms of the state. At least that's her story."

JAGGER

NOW . . . The Stones' Rawest Yet

By RUSSELL FREETHY

The Rolling Stones have been putting down just about everything the past four years, expressing their contempt with witty cynicism. This is not to say that they don't deserve some credit for the lovely lyrics of Lady Jane and other songs like it.

But, unlike their contemporaries, The Beatles, they have not managed to warm the hearts of the elders in this world.

And now, with Beggars' Banquet, The Stones have launched their rawest, lewdest, most arrogant, and most savage attack.

Banquet is rare and beautiful; it is their manifesto, delivered first class at our old enemy, the Establishment.

The Stones have matured considerably without sacrificing any of their basic aggressiveness. They are as perverse and satanic as ever.

Without qualification, Beggars' Banquet is their finest effort to date.

This is extended to include the supposed "poor taste" of the original jacket, which was the cause of the inane postponement of the album's release. It sits right up there with Revolver, Sgt. Pepper's, Blonde on Blonde, Surrealistic Pillow, and their own Between the Buttons.

Musically, The Stones have developed into the perfect "rock and roll" band. They effortlessly rise far above the hangers-on in today's rock music merry-go-round.

The wizardry of Keith Richard on guitar is a synthesis of hard rock and blues second to none.

The peerless piano artistry of Nicky Hopkins (on record only), the expert rythmn and slide guitar work of Brian Jones and the masterful Bill Wyman on bass create an incomparable grouping of sheer brilliance.

And Charlie Watts is as advanced technically as the best, while still retaining his unstructured and demanding, deafening drumming.

Jagger's rough-edged voice seems to be under complete control; never passing the breaking point as before. This enables it to be used as an instrument at the same time as it adequately conveys the word passages of the songs.

What emerges from this conglomeration of talent is best displayed in the Banquet album.

In Symphony for the Devil, Jagger assumes the role of Lucifer. It is a musical indictment of history's callousness; from Jesus to Hitler, from the Russian Revolution to the Kennedys' assassinations.

The Stones have never been more sophisticated and subtly political.

Dig Richard's chilling guitar riff — a teeth-grating treble run striking out from an extremely taut instrumental break. It seems to set the mold from whence the Stones came.

Don't let the skillful three-finger picking, the good mandolin playing and the fiddle in Factory Girl fool you. It is as ludicrous as ever (who but the Stones would sing about a girl with fat knees and stains on her dress).

Stray Cat Blues evokes all the arrogance, sadism and egocentricity of Jagger at his meanest.

Despite Jigsaw Puzzle being more than faintly reminiscent of something by Dylan, it is somewhat redeemed by a driving beat, screaming guitars and some first-rate piano work by Hopkins.

Dear Doctor is an amiable parody of Nashville music, sung in the appropriate country twang, and Jagger's voice has a new, low funky tone in the old southern blues standard, Prodigal Son. (electronically enhanced, no doubt).

Parachute Woman, aside from the Lightnin' Hopkin's style guitar run at the beginning, with its blatant sexuality and aggressive music is classic, dirty Stones.

All in all, it might be said that The Rolling Stones are without equal in their field; solid rock, firmly entwined in the earthy roots of the blues.

Burr to Portray Pope John XXIII

ROME (Reuters) — Actor Raymond Burr, who has played television lawyer Perry Mason and now stars in the Ironside TV series, plans to don the robes of a pope.

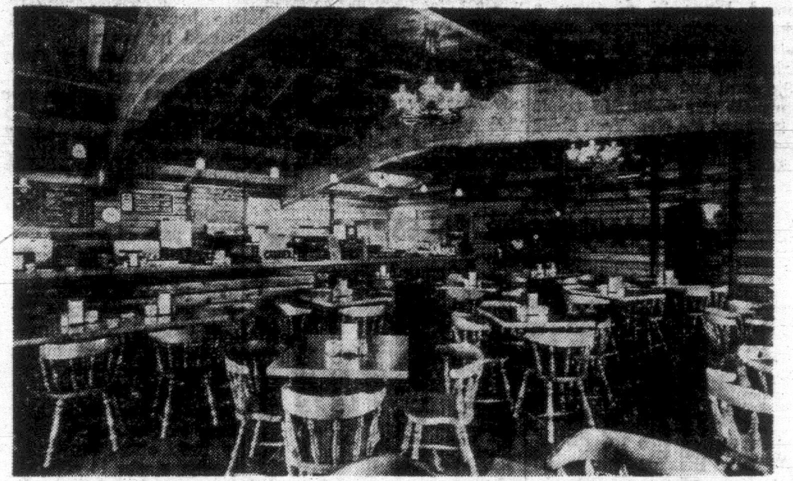
Burr, a native of New Westminster, B.C., announced here Friday he plans to portray Pope John XXIII in a film because he is "fascinated by his personality."

Burr, a Protestant, said he is "convinced that in four years, Pope John influenced all the churches more than anyone has done during the last 200 years."

LAST RECITAL in the evening series sponsored by University of Victoria division of music will take place Wednesday at the MacLaurin Building and will feature two outstanding resident musicians, duo pianists Winifred Scott and Robin Wood. The husband-and-wife team will perform Brahms' Sonata in F minor and the Rachmaninoff Suite No. 2. The evening series will conclude March 5 with a performance of Rossini's Petite Messe Solennelle by University Choral Society.

NO TALENT

Show business personality Lucille Ball was once told by an instructor of a New York drama school that she had "no talent" and advised to seek another career.



Margarette and Ted Hobbs have created the unique Longhorn Restaurant pictured above. It combines the use of pre-cut logs, hanging lamps and "friendly" furniture which give it an authentic western atmosphere and charm. The idea originated from a cottage Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs built on the Gulf Islands a few years ago. They were so pleased with the warmth and welcoming effect of the pre-cut logs that they were convinced others would enjoy the same surroundings in a restaurant. Both Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs are native Victorians and live in the university district near their restaurant. The Longhorn is a non-franchised family restaurant.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Tighter Bank Credit Blamed for Slump

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A steep plunge originating on Wall Street knocked almost three per cent off the market value of Canadian stocks this week, and the decline showed no signs of slowing on Friday.

The Toronto industrial index lost 5.67 points to 187.37, its biggest drop since early January when North American markets went through a brief slump. The index closed at its lowest level since Jan. 13.

The composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, following the same trend, fell 5.19 to 182.38.

There was no specific news to account for the plunge, and brokers said the market "will have to tell its own story."

The current trend towards tighter bank credit and higher interest rates, also originating in the United States, took most of the blame, although no further increases were announced.

WEAKEST GROUPS

At Toronto and Montreal, the weakest groups were western oils, retailers, steels, food processors, mines, banks, pipelines and utilities.

Only golds and communications ended the week with a net gain.

Real estate stocks posted the biggest average loss, the junior industrials in general declined sharply from their recent all-time high.

J. H. Crang and Co.'s stock index of 79 junior industrials, which includes real estate issues, dropped 11.3 points to 219.3, after touching a record the previous week.

Despite the sharp slump, Canadian stocks still are trading at higher levels than U.S. stocks. The Toronto industrial index touched a record early Monday before the Wall Street plunge spread to Canada.

VANCOUVER BOOM

Commenting on the current boom in mining shares at Vancouver, John Van Luven, exchange president, said he thinks the heavy trading surge has passed its peak.

Volume reached a record at 8,558,783 shares Monday.

"I would say we've seen the top level," said Mr. Van Luven. "We may have the odd 8,000,000-share day again. But I don't think we'll see it sustained at that high level again for a while."

The pace of trading had been picking up over the previous two months until it was running at about three times the average daily volume for 1968.

The boom was spurred by a number of recent mining discoveries, leading to a wave of speculation in the market. Sources say mining promoters have had to expend surprisingly little effort to boost penny mining stocks to several times their recent prices.

Vancouver has become a centre of mining speculation partly because of the belief that the rules governing the securities industry are less strictly enforced in British Columbia than in Ontario and Quebec.

Series of Plunges Hits Wall Street

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — The stock market tumbled sharply through four straight sessions this week, hit by a breakdown of technical indicators and mounting uncertainty over the course of the economy.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped more than five points on each of the four trading days and finished the week with a loss of 35.30 points at 916.65. It was the Dow's lowest close of the year and brought the average back to the level of late summer.

All 30 issues in the average showed losses—24 of them a point or more— although some had rallied against the trend at various times during the week.

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was down 3.82 points at 99.79 and the New York Stock Exchange index fell 2.33 points to 56.31.

With the market only open four days—the exchanges closed Friday for Washington's birthday—trading volume slipped to 45.55 million shares from the 47.33 million turned over a week earlier.

On three of the four days, more than 1,000 issues lost ground and, by week's end, declining stocks swamped gainers by 1,455 to 176. In the previous week, 854 issues fell and 705 rose.

The technical break came when the Dow Industrials moved under the 920 level into new low ground for the year. Last month, the average came down to 921.25 before rallying above the 950 level. Last week, it gave the whole thing back in one swoop.

Additionally, the technically-inclined pointed out that the daily totals earlier this month showed only slim pluralities of advances over declines — and vice versa. When the losers began taking a clear lead over the winners, the market's path was set.

Oil Market Likely to Be Issue in Trudeau-Nixon Talks

By CARL MOLLINS

OTTAWA (CP) — The future pattern of oil marketing in North America is likely to be a bargaining issue when Prime Minister Trudeau meets President Nixon in Washington next month.

Mr. Trudeau can be expected to urge the president at their March 24-25 meeting to keep Western Canada's needs for expanded oil outlets in mind as Mr. Nixon directs the development of a new petroleum import policy for the United States.

The U.S. might require Canada to pay a price for co-operation in oil policy perhaps in the form of continued Canadian co-operation in NATO and the North American Air Defence Command and other areas of international interest.

Mr. Nixon announced Thursday he is taking personal charge of a study which he said should produce a new oil policy in the near future. He assigned aide Robert Ellsworth to conduct the study.

Canadian government officials also are engaged in preliminary work on revising this country's national oil policy, which defines import, export, and distribution patterns and is tied closely to the U.S. policy.

Some discussions have already taken place between U.S. and Canadian officials.

The Canadian policy, devised a decade ago, means western producers export to the U.S. while U.S. producers can supply Eastern Canada.

Lately, western Canadian producers have been concerned by signs of a squeeze developing from discoveries of oil in Alaska last summer and a series of recent announcements that refinery capacity in Eastern Canada, notably in Quebec, will be greatly expanded.

Indications that the increasing Alaskan production will be seeking markets down the Pacific coast while increased refinery capacity in the east could cause pressure in central North American markets have prompted the western producers to press for an expanded market in the U.S. or elsewhere.

Even as the threat to the western producers appears to grow, Canadian production is expected to expand from development of arctic petroleum resources, especially in the area of the Mackenzie River delta.

Among other things the Canadian producers were hopeful that a pipeline might be built along the Mackenzie River basin to channel both Alaskan and Canadian arctic oil into existing pipelines east of the Rockies.

Another possible issue is Canada's assertion of oil exploration rights in the deep arctic, neighboring both Canadian and Alaskan territory.

U.S. authorities are understood to have questioned Canada's right to lease the areas for exploration purposes to Pan-Arctic Oil, in which the Canadian government has a large interest.

Bankers Agree to Play Hot Money Crises Ad Hoc

By ERIC WENTWORTH

PARIS (WP) — The just-published text of a statement drawn up by leading central bankers recently in Basel, Switzerland, confirms reports they agreed to cope with any new monetary crisis promptly but on an "ad hoc" basis.

The bankers, in their statement dated Feb. 10 but released only this week by the Deutsche Bundesbank, West Germany's central bank, said decisions about "the form, extent and duration" of special anti-crisis measures and who would take part in them "will be taken in the light of the situation prevailing in each individual case."

The "Basel club" bankers, so known for their periodic meetings as the Bank for International Settlements in that city, had been charged with finding ways to deal more effectively with flows of speculative "hot capital" of the sort that touched off last November's monetary upheaval involving the German mark, French franc and British pound.

GROUP OF TEN

The Basel meetings bring together central bankers from the "group of ten" including the United States, Canada, Japan and major European nations — plus an 11th, Switzerland. Officials of the Federal Reserve Board and Federal Reserve Bank of New York represent the United States.

The bankers, in agreeing to consider any new anti-crisis credit packages on a case-by-case basis, noted this approach has worked several times in the past. In any event, they said, "there already exists substantial facilities that can be and have been used to achieve a return flow of speculative funds." They cited the Fed's "swap network" of short-term credit lines totaling $10.5 billion and involving 14 central banks plus the Basel-based BIS, which is a sort of "bankers' bank."

READY TO MEET

"If at any time in the future," they stated, "it appears that new arrangemens are needed in order to cope with an unusually large movement of speculative funds, the central banks of the group declare themselves ready to meet together immediately at the request of the president of the BIS to arrange such additional facilities as the group may judge appropriate." Central banks of other nations, they added, might also be included in such multinational schemes.

The bankers said they believed that in any new credit arrangement to combat speculative capital flows, both the relative size of the various creditors' pledges and the timing of the recipient country's borrowings "should reflect the direction of the flows involved."

"Thus," they explained, "central banks that were receiving funds at the time could accept proportionately larger shares in the arrangement and could agree to be drawn on first."

Customer Service Spells Success

By G. S. KENT
Business Editor

Nine months worth of success in just four months of operation is an enviable way to start a new business, especially one where the competition is well established.

This is the story of Mazda Motors of Canada Ltd., which will not be a year old until July, and which hadn't opened an outlet until Sept. 5. Up to the end of December the performance was parallel with projections for May, according to general manager John Brown, of Vancouver. He divulged no figures but the company said 180 cars were sold by Sept. 30.

Acceptance of the Japanese-built Mazda line of cars by a domestic car-conscious public is difficult to explain, although competitive pricing, Italian style concept and well-finished automobiles has a lot to do with it.

Among other factors are an emphasis on young men in the dealer chain and a departure from the traditional thinking that imported cars are good for only a limited number of sales in any given period.

"We wanted to inject new blood into merchandizing," said Brown while in Victoria to visit Argyle Mazda Motors Friday.

He said Mazda was aware that dealers had "pretty fixed ideas about marketing and servicing automobiles." And far too many ignored customer service once sales were made. Manufacturers shared the view, considering their responsibility ended with the sale.

"We feel our responsibility begins when a car is sold to a customer," said Brown, and the Mazda people will see that an owner gets parts and service and satisfaction. "It's only logical."

George Argyle, president of the local Mazda outlet, uses a customer follow-up service, not just for the first few miles of a car's life, but designed to keep in touch with car and owner after the sale.

To a new car owner this could mean the difference between carefree motoring and a frequent bitterness and disillusion that follows shortly after a deal is closed in the conventional way.

There are 25 Mazda dealers in B.C. and the move to Alberta began last week, much in the nature of a military operation.

"In many ways it is like setting up the advance of an army," said Brown. "You advance too fast and lose your supply lines. You do much better by assuring the lines of supply, and by setting up in B.C. first we are making sure the people of B.C. get service."

The Canadian company hopes to have national representation in a reasonable time, and then — or perhaps during the Canadian expansion—Mazda intends to enter the U.S. market.

It is a new name in North America, but Mazda has been known in most other parts of the world for many years. The Hiroshima-based company, Toyo Kogyo Co., is 50 years old and has one of the world's largest auto factories—possibly the most automated.

Its vice-president, Kohei Matsuda (pronounced Mazda) is president of the Canadian company. Mazda of Canada's vice-president is Rojgi Yunoki, resident representative of Toyo Kogyo.

The dealers chosen by Mazda are nearly 50 per cent independents, like Argyle, making them responsible for the success of their own operations. Besides the Victoria outlet, located in the old Page building on Douglas, there are dealers in Nanaimo and Courtenay, and another is slated for Duncan.

What about the competition, especially in the light of Ford's Maverick, a small car due in April to counter inroads of imports? Brown replies:

"Manufacturers for years have been saying there's no place for the import. Finally they come out with Maverick and we think it's the greatest thing that's happened to the import business. We consider it an endorsement."

Assume he knows what he's talking about, a man with 27 years' experience with British Motor Corp., nearly half of it in Canada.

Remember the outcry from salesmen when Victoria Real Estate Board proposed last fall to change the commission basis and tighten control of the local real estate industry?

Salesmen have accepted the changes brought in up to Dec. 16, despite a promise of legal action.

Some members of the industry still are not happy, believing that smaller firms are at a disadvantage when facing the resources of big companies and their higher capacity to attract and hold salesmen. A small firm used to be able to offer a higher percentage of the commission, but now all new salesmen or transferees are bound by the same 50 per cent rule. To attract top men the larger firms can offer better fringe benefits and, often, internal financing for their staff's sales. Smaller firms can't.

In spite of this, Real Estate Board president Douglas Peaker said the new system "appears to be working without difficulty" and only four cases have been referred to the board's mediation committee to deal with salesmen prejudiced under the new system for reasons beyond their control.

Major objectives of the system are to reduce the numbers of people entering the business, eliminate shifting from one firm to another and raise the standards of the business.

Salesmen who remained with their employers still enjoy the former higher commission split, usually 70 per cent, but ranging up to 90 per cent.

Boeing Makes Major Alterations To Improve 737 Performance

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. said Friday major improvements have been made to the Boeing 737 Twinjet transport, increasing the plane's payload, speed, range and ability to lift and stop.

A major change is use of a new high-performance thrust-reverser that will stop the plane 23 per cent faster than the original model. Range was increased an average 4.5 per cent under other drag improvement changes, Boeing said.

Nearly 130 Model 737s already are in commercial service with a total of 100,000 hours' flight time. The company has sold 228 of the planes to 23 airlines around the world.

Boeing said the improvements will be included in the 135th plane off the 737 assembly line in Seattle early next month.

Sprinkle Crew Makes Arctic Ice Anchors

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP)—Four men plan to spend the next 40 days or so spraying water on a couple of huge chunks of ice in the Arctic Ocean.

The scientific study is part of a high priority project aimed at determining whether a year-round tanker route by way of the Northwest Passage is feasible for transporting oil from Alaska's Arctic slope to East Coast refineries.

The experiment became possible Jan. 26 when it was discovered that two huge "ice islands" had grounded themselves in 90 feet of water just 20 to 30 miles north of the Prudhoe Bay area where two oil wells with great production potentials were completed last year.

It is conceivable that tankers some day will be using the ice islands as moorings.

"This is a God-given opportunity to find out what we want to know," said Stanley B. Haas, proejct manager of the Arctic marine force of the Humble Oil and Refining Co.

"What we need to know is how a grounded structure behaves in such an environment," Haas said. "We thought of building an observation platform and then heard of the ice islands. They seem to be suited for our purpose."

The ages of the two being sprayed off Prudhoe Bay are unknown but they apparently have been floating about the Arctic some time. They are only 115 feet thick and their sides measure only 200 to 300 feet. About 25 feet of ice protrudes above the water line.

Haas wants to "capture" the islands by increasing their weight so sharply they will remain grounded winter and summer despite wind changes and mean temperatures that vary from 40 below to 40 above.

Spraying began Tuesday in an attempt to add six inches of new ice a day to each island. Spraying is to continue until the thickness of each is increased a maximum of 20 feet.

Once the spraying is completed, the crew will become observers and record environmental data, a vital component of the study.

"We think we may have a mooring structure right there if we can preserve the islands," Haas said.

A memorial service was held on Monday, 17th February, 1969, at 2 p.m., in St. Peter's Anglican Church, Town of Mount Royal, for Herbert Kellock Domville Heming, who died whilst on a recent business engagement in New York. A private cremation is being arranged. He was 62 years of age.

Arthur Mayse

As you may already know, a big fat rumor of a highly ominous sort is pussyfooting around our town. A pronouncement by a professional soothsayer in Washington, D.C., brought it to birth. The tremor that rattled Victoria early on Feb. 14 helped it along. It has now made its way into the schools at sub-classroom level, and gained new dimensions.

The last time I heard it, here's how it ran:

"Vancouver Island is going to be hit by a terrible earthquake just before Easter, and will sink into the sea."

That's a mighty interesting prospect, although my personal hunch is that our rocky, timbered, 282-mile-long platform will still be solid as ever when Easter has come and gone.

Naturally, though, certain precautions are indicated. One day soon, I mean to turn our boat rightside-up, ready for a fast getaway in case the prophet has come up with the authentic scoop.

I hope, too, that if such should be the case, my dear ones will manage to wake me. To my disgust, I have slept through all minor shakes with which we have been visited, including the last one. Didn't know a thing about it, in fact, until lighter sleepers told me next morning.

Meanwhile, here are some facts gathered in conversation with Dr. William Milne, district seismologist attached to the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory.

"Just too big to be possible," says Dr. Milne of the Island-swallowing monster that rumor and vivid imagination have conjured up.

Even the San Francisco earthquake, which registered an appalling 8¼ on the 10-point Richter logarithmic scale, only produced a horizontal earth movement of about 20 feet.

As for the Lisbon quake of 1775—probably the most severe in recorded history — the horizontal movement was negligible.

And though the Courtenay-Comox area was tousled by a seven-plus tremor in 1946, we're too far from the San Andreas Fault to rate a shaking of the sort that tumbles houses.

By way of further reassurance, Victoria is most unlikely to be visited by any seismographic disturbance worse than the minor rumbles we've had in the past.

When it comes to earthquake prediction, however, we're all on our own. No technique or instrument yet devised by science can give advance warning.

Whether the rare supersensitive human reacts to those immense stresses and tensions building below, nobody can state with authority.

It is known that several persons did claim to have been overtaken by feelings of unease before the devastating Alaska earthquake. But since these premonitions were reported after the event, the matter remains unproved.

It may be that animals and birds make better prophets. In the aftermath of the San Francisco city-buster, all manner of odd accounts emerged. Some had to do with birds that flew about widly or settled on the ground, and deer and other wild creatures that fled the area before disaster struck.

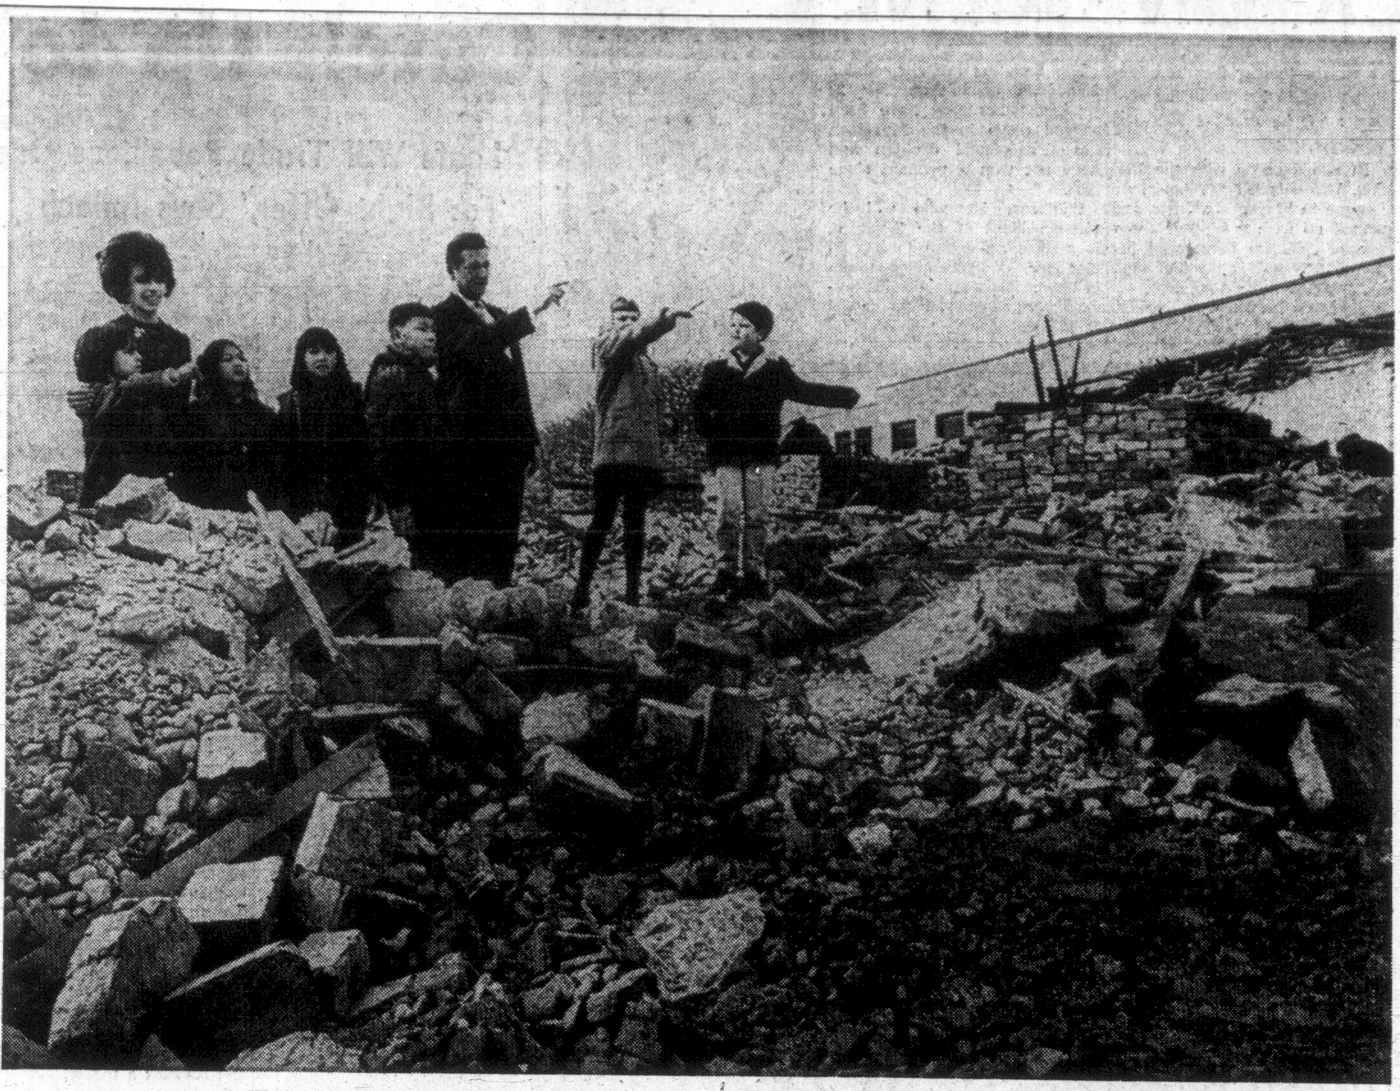
Whether such foreknowledge truly exists, science is unprepared to say.

Getting back to our Island home, I think that despite overblown rumor, we are safe on it as mankind can hope to be anywhere.

True, it's had its geological ups and downs, but these, were not cramped into weeks, months or years. They are measured in millenia piled one on the other.

These, of course, are facts that rumor takes in stride, especially when the winds of prophecy are behind them.

Even so, anytime an earthquake hearty enough to rouse this sound sleeper happens along . . . me for the boat!



DOWN WITH SCHOOL is a slogan most children voice sometime, but few ever see it translated into action. These Blanshard School pupils stand amid rubble where last year they attended North Ward. It's a lesson in civics. North Ward became obsolete, parents became angry, they confronted council, council tackled school board, school board asked voters for money—presto, a new school. From left are Perri-Ann Perry, Mrs. Elaine Shoemaker, Bertha Kum, Dana Eng, Ken Kuan, principal John B. Robertson, Chrissie Dionne and Wayne Linde. Soon all traces of old school will be gone. Whitlow, Dean Front-Runners As Anglican Synod in Deadlock

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

The choice for bishop of the Anglican diocese of British Columbia (Vancouver Island) lies mainly between Bishop Ralph Dean of the Cariboo and Dean Brian Whitlow of Christ Church Cathedral in Victoria, it was learned today.

DEAN WHITLOW

BISHOP DEAN
. . . has lay vote

An unofficial source said this was chiefly responsible for a deadlock in the voting for a new bishop at Friday's 12-hour election in Christ Church Cathedral.

The source said most voting clergy favored Dean Whitlow while lay delegates favored Bishop Dean.

200 VOTING

More than 200 clergy and lay delegates from every parish on Vancouver Island took part in Friday's election. They voted separately on 14 ballots between 11:30 a.m. and 11:30 p.m.

According to canon law, the successful candidate must have a two-thirds majority on both votes. By 11:30 p.m. no decisive vote had been cast and the election was adjourned until Friday, March 7.

Purpose of the adjournment is to enable clergy and laymen to consult further with their parishes concerning the choice of a new bishop.

Some delegates said the clergy favor Dean Whitlow because he has proven his ability as an administrator and is known to all the clergy on the Island.

Since the retirement of Archbishop Harold Sexton as bishop of the diocese on Dec. 31, the dean has acted as administrative officer.

He has been dean of Christ Church Cathedral since 1955 and received a doctor of divinity degree from the Anglican Theological College in 1967. This was partly in recognition of his book, Hurdles To Heaven, which was published in New York in 1963 and has since had a wide sale.

Before coming to Victoria, he had charge of an Anglican parish in the heart of French Canada — at Wakeham and York in the Gaspe peninsula.

Bishop Dean was consecrated bishop of the Cariboo at Christ Church Cathedral, Victoria, in 1957. In 1964 he was appointed executive officer of the Anglican Communion with headquarters in London, England. He has been there since on leave of absence, but is still bishop of the Cariboo.

ACCLAIMED

He was an important figure at the world-wide Lambeth Conference of Anglican bishops in London last July. He was acclaimed for his organizational work and for devising a system whereby delegates could raise subjects outside the agenda.

Bishop Dean was formerly vice-principal of the London (England) College of Divinity and principal of Emmanuel College, Saskatoon.

At Friday's election here, the first ballot cast was a nominating ballot and resulted in 22 nominees. After the second ballot one name was withdrawn and, after the third ballot, there were five withdrawals.

17 CANDIDATES

Among the 17 candidates standing for office when voting began were:

Dean Whitlow, Canon Hilary Butler, Archdeacon A. E. Hendy, Canon Charles Bishop, Canon Hywel Jones, Canon Brian Page, Rev. J. A. Roberts, Rev. H. Gordon Walker and Canon G. H. Greenhalgh of Nanaimo.

Three bishops were nominated: Bishop Dean of the Cariboo, Bishop John Anderson of Rupert's Land and Bishop W. G. Burch of Edmonton.

Bishop Edward Scott of Kootenay was also nominated but declined to stand.

During balloting the cathedral doors were locked and only synod delegates were allowed in the body of the church. After each ballot was counted, one of the cathedral bells was rung to recall voters to their seats.

Clergyman Seeking Tory Post?

A Victoria-born clergyman has been mentioned as a candidate for leadership of the Progressive Conservative Party in British Columbia, but his father says the report is "premature."

Rev. Walter McLean of Winnipeg, son of Rev. J. L. W. McLean, retired moderator of the Presbyterian Church of Canada and former Victoria alderman, has been named in Vancouver political circles as a leadership contender.

Rev. Walter McLean spent several years in mission work in Nigeria and lately has been involved in youth work in Manitoba. A graduate of University of B.C. he was 1962 president of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

NOMINATED IN 1967

He was instrumental in setting up the Canadian University Service Overseas Program. In 1967 he was nominated to seek candidacy for the Victoria riding for the Conservatives but was edged out by realtor Eric Charman.

The Vancouver reports said Mr. McLean has agreed to accept the B.C. party leadership if a salary of $25,000 and expenses of $15,000 are guaranteed. Decision would depend on convention votes in May.

SECRETARY General of the Royal Commonwealth Society, Stephen Kemp, will visit Victoria from Thursday to March 3. On the last leg of a Commonwealth tour, Mr. Kemp has visited Ceylon, Hong Kong, New Zealand and Fiji. He will be guest of honor at a luncheon meeting of the society at the Red Lion Inn, on Friday.

Ask The Times

Q. I noted your reference to the earthquake on June 23, 1946, but we had quite a shake in Prince Rupert in the summer of 1948 or 1949. Was this not felt also in Victoria?

A. A severe earthquake took place on the northwest tip of the Queen Charlotte Islands on Aug. 21, 1949, which resulted in tremors being felt at Prince Rupert. However, the tremor in Victoria was light and would not have been noticed by many.

Bee-lieve It! It Isn't All Honey and Spice

By PETE LOUDON

People who call Victoria the city of gardens may be surprised to learn bees can't make a living here.

That's the case at least with the little buzzers that lived in a glass-walled colony in the old Provincial Museum.

Museum director Dr. Clifford Carl said today he hopes a new colony will be started this spring in the new museum. But once again he will have to supplement their diet with sugar and water.

Blooms in the Empress Gardens and around the Legislative Building's lawns just aren't sufficient and the bees would burn themselves out flitting back and forth to Beacon Hill Park if they didn't get a handout, said Dr. Carl.

The problem is easily solved, the sugar solution being slowly dripped into the hive. Tougher is the problem of building a bee freeway from the hive through the walls of the new building.

The one-way shaded glass used in the new building can't be bored. Other routes are being studied and it is hoped two or three "frames" can be built into the new display.

The old bee display was fascinating to young and old. It was started each year with a donation of a handful of domesticated honey bees including a queen, a few thousand workers and a few hundred drones.

It's a short life but a merry one for the bees. The queen lives an average of three years, eating, mating and laying eggs—up to 1,800 in a single day. (Must be all that vitamin bee.)

All the workers are female. Their life span is six weeks to six months. They are so busy making wax, building combs, nursing the larvae, feeding the queen, cleaning the hive, filling cracks, storing nectar, water and pollen—not to mention mounting guard—they have no time for love-making.

The queen has all the drones to herself. All they do is mate with her and die. Die-hards who are still around by autumn are denied food until they weaken and are driven from the hive to die.

The moral is, if you are going to be a son of a bee, you'd better buzz off.

Power Fails In Fairfield

Failure of an underground cable at 2 a.m. today left residents in the Fairfield area without power for about 40 minutes.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said power was re-routed through another circuit as soon as the difficulty was discovered.

A 10-block area was affected.

Junk Car 'Blight' Alarming

Worse Before Gets Better, Says Provincial Official

Police, municipal officials and residents throughout southern Vancouver Island are growing alarmed at an increase in "automobile blight."

The number of junked and abandoned cars on streets and side roads or dumped on private properties is creating a problem which a provincial government official says will "get worse before it gets better."

Deputy Chief Robert Peterson of Saanich said the problem of abandoned cars in his district is taking on more serious dimensions.

"Now that the motor vehicle testing station has come into being it has resulted in an increase in abandoned cars," he said. "Many older cars with mechanical drawbacks are being rejected and some of them are just left by the road. We consider it a real problem."

He said a Saanich municipal bylaw calls for a fine of $100 to $250 for anyone convicted of abandoning a car, but often the owner is hard to trace.

"If we find any person who has disposed of an automobile body we will prosecute him," he said.

Colwood RCMP say cars left on public property in their district are towed away and if possbile the owner is traced. When the owner is located he must pay the towing costs then dispose of his car elsewhere.

But when junk cars are left on private property the RCMP takes no action. If the property owner wishes the car removed he must remove it at his own expense.

Costly to Get Rid of Junk

Often the owner doesn't bother to remove cars someone deposited on his property. This is particularly noticeable in some areas of Langford and Colwood.

And there is no simple or inexpensive solution.

It costs money to dispose of a junked car — if the owner can find somewhere to dispose of it.

In Greater Victoria there is only one dump — on Hartland Road—which will accept wrecked cars. The dumping fee is $10 and may soon go up to $15.

Add this to the time, cost and effort involved in transporting a car body to the dump and the tab is higher.

The alternative to hauling a car to the Hartland Road dump is to call an auto wrecker. Wreckers charge from $15 to $35, depending on the condition of the car and the distance it must be hauled.

Many wreckers no longer haul cars away for any price because they say they cannot make it pay.

In past years, before city pollution bylaws prohibited the burning out of cars and before steel prices dropped, most wreckers were happy to haul cars away for nothing.

One dealer, Ron Green of Capital Iron on Store Street, says the biggest reason his company is not currently interested in handling scrapped cars is the burning bylaws.

Burning Law Halted Operation

"It's a simple matter to burn a car," he said. "Once they are burned they are perfectly good raw material for a steel mill.

"But since the city tightened burning bylaws, the only method of stripping them (cars) is by hand. This takes too much time and isn't very profitable," he added.

Mr. Green said he has suggested to municipal governments that all cars be licenced until they are officially disposed of. This would mean that every car, in running condition or not, must have a valid licence or the registered owner would be fined.

"People would be encouraged to pay $15 to have the car removed rather than pay $22 every year for a new licence."

Another auto wrecker said this would only solve part of the problem. He said there is often no way of knowing the owner of a junked car.

"People bring wrecks during the night and leave them in front of my gate," he said. "They'll take the licence plates off, file the serial numbers down, and you can't find out who owns them.

"Then I have to turn around and lug them to the dump after I take any worthwhile parts off. It's getting to be a real headache."

Officials in all districts recognize the "visual pollution" problem, but the municipal budgets fail to reflect this recognition.

Tony Roberts, director of the Capital Regional Planning Board, said "about two years ago we made basic recommendations to the minister of municipal affairs, but the situation hasn't changed.

"The public and the government has to consider how serious this is," he said.

TWENTIETH CENTURY disease which threatens to envelope the southern area of Vancouver Island is the abandonment of junk cars. This is one example where the owner dumped the car body along Millstream Road, Langford, rather than pay a $10 fee at a garbage dump.

MATURED, EAGER . . . . . . AND HIGHEST PAID

WILLIAMS BACK ON SCENE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ted Williams has returned to baseball as a manager to try to spin a miracle with Washington Senators.

"I never wanted a job as much as I wanted this one," says Williams.

The Senators named Williams as part-owner of the last-place American League club Friday and gave him a lavish five-year contract as the highest paid manager in baseball history.

Williams promised no immediate pennants — just improvement. He will plunge into spring training Monday at Pompano Beach, Fla.

Williams, remembered for his feuds with fans and sports writers, was warm and candid at his first news conference Friday night.

"I hope I have matured a little more," he said.

Asked if Ted Williams, as manager, would tolerate a player with a temper like Ted Williams had in his youth, he shot back: "If he can hit like Ted Williams, yes."

In two decades with the Red Sox, Williams led the American League in hitting six times and wound up with a lifetime average of .344. He hammered 521 home runs and is the last man ever to bat more than .400, eclipsing the mark with .406 in 1941.

The Senators are starved for that kind of hitting. For 22 straight years they have been bogged down in the American League's second division and have not won a pennant since 1933.

Williams, 50, who will be vice-president of the Senators, is getting an option to buy 10 per cent of club stock worth $940,000. Estimates on his annual salary ranged from $50,000 to $100,000.

Seals, and Odds, Catch Up to Blues

Leafs Will Trade Rebellious One 'For Right Offer,' Says Imlach

By The Canadian Press

If they didn't break open some champagne in Oakland Seals dressing room Friday night, they should have.

The Seals had every reason to celebrate after posting their first victory over St. Louis Blues since the teams entered the National Hockey League last season.

Oakland edged the Blues 3-2 to end a 15-game St. Louis unbeaten streak against the Seals.

Despite the Oakland victory, St. Louis still holds a commanding lead in the Western Division. The Blues lead the runner-up Seals by 21 points.

Centre Mike Laughton paced Oakland with two goals while Ted Hampson added one. Gary Sabourin and Barclay Plager connected for the Blues.

BLUES RALLY LATE

Oakland led 2-0 at the end of the first period and 3-0 at the end of the second. The Blues rallied for two final-period goals and removed goaltender Glenn Hall in the final seconds of the game in an unsuccessful attempt to tie the score.

A crowd of 5,665 at San Francisco watched a third-period brawl between Noel Picard of St. Louis and Doug Roberts of Oakland. Picard received a minor, major and misconduct and Roberts a major.

In disputes off the ice, centre Mike Walton and manager-coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs apparently are far from a settlement of their differences.

Imlach said in an interview Friday that Walton, who deserted the team Wednesday and was suspended, will be traded "when the right offer is made."

ANNOYED AT ATTITUDE

Walton stayed behind Wednesday night when the Maple Leafs caught an overnight train to Montreal. He sent a telegram to assistant manager-coach King Clancy in which he complained of insufficient ice time.

Imlach was annoyed that Walton, a 15-goal scorer this season, left the team after an important vicory, the 5-1 triumph against Montreal Canadiens Wednesday.

"Can you imagine anyone complaining of being benched after we win a big game?" asked Imlach. "Wouldn't you think a player, if he placed the team's interests first, would be a little pleased?"

Coach Keith Allen of Philadelphia Flyers has expressed an interest in Walton, and offered goaltender Doug Favell in exchange.

Allen is having trouble with a centre on his team, Forbes Kennedy. Kennedy was sent to Quebec of the American Hockey League Friday after being suspended by the Flyers, but he refused to report. General manager Bud Poile of Philadelphia said Kennedy would remain on the suspended list.

Montreal Canadiens announced Friday that goaltender Gump Worsley will be back in the lineup tonight when the Canadiens play host to Philadelphia.

SOCCER DEMAND SNUBBED

LONDON — Snow and ice disrupted the British soccer program again today but top men of the English Football League continued to turn a cold shoulder to demands for a mid-season break.

English soccer had been virtually at a standstill for the past two weeks because of freezing weather and this morning 33 matches scheduled for today had been called off —24 in England and nine in Scotland. The total was expected to climb higher after morning inspection of pitches.

League officials, under increasing pressure to suspend action during January and February, have discounted the demands and produced statistics covering the last 23 seasons to back up their argument.

PUBLISH FIGURES

Sir Matt Busby, manager of European champions Manchester United, has repeatedly called for a mid-season break, arguing that skilful football is impossible on frostbound or waterlogged fields.

But the league published figures which showed that in 23 seasons since the Second World War only two per cent of all league fixtures have been postponed beacuse of ice and snow.

The league also produced figures showing that attendance during January and February was little different from the average for a full season.

HALIFAX (CP)—The 360-mile ocean yacht race from Marblehead, Mass., to Halifax will start this year on July 6. It will be the 14th contest in a series started in 1905.

Kelowna Club Helps Cougars

PENTICTON—Kelowna Buckaroos, a season-long thorn in the side of the Cougars, looked "like roses" to Victoria's entry in the B.C. Junior Hockey League today.

That's because the Buckaroos turned on Pentiction to defeat the league-leaders 5-4 before over 900 fans here Friday.

It was a jarring setback for Penticton, a happy decision for the second-place Cougars. Victoria remains three points behind Penticton, but the Cougars' hopes for a first-place finish draw greatest buoyancy from the fact the Island team has three games in hand.

CARR SPARKLES

One of those comes up tonight in Victoria when the Cougars entertain third-place Vernon Essos.

Nanaimo-reared Gene Carr was the bright light for Kelowna, which is the only team to hold an edge over Victoria in seasonal play. Carr scored three goals while Larry Lenarduzzi and Ken Phillips added singles.

Phillips' goal was the big one, however. It came at 18:40 of the final period, capping a great Kelowna comeback. Trailing 4-2, the Buckaroos pulled out the win by ramming in three goals within three minutes, 27 seconds.

Ken Connor, with two, Tom Madden and Kerry Moss were Penticton's scorers in a rugged game.

PYLE BRILLIANT

Penticton out-shot Kelowna 55-29 but the Bucks drew a sparkling goaltending display from Ron Pyle. The Buckaroos also had to shrug off manpower disadvantages for most of the first and second periods.

Vernon Visits Tonight

Ron Grahame will be hoping Victoria Cougars work as hard trying to prevent goals as they labor in scoring efforts tonight at Memorial Arena when they resume their pursuit of first place in the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

The Cats have a good shot at the regular-season title. They trail the pace-setting Penticton Broncos by three points but have five games remaining on their schedule while the Broncos have only two remaining.

They tangle with Vernon Essos here tonight and play New Westminster Royals next Wednesday in their final home game before completing their schedule with three tussles on the road.

Grahame has the inside track in the race for the goaltending title, now a two-man duel between the Cougar netminder and Penticton's Dave McLelland.

HAYS HAS BIG LEAD

In the nets for 22 of Victoria's 35 games, Grahame has yielded 71 goals for a goals-against mark of 3.23. McLelland has appeared in games and allowed 125 tallies for an average of 3.88. Ron Pyle of Kelowna is a distant third at 4.33.

Flashy Ed Hays of the Broncos apparently has the point title all wrapped up with 56 goals and 44 assists for 100 points. Victoria's Grant Evans is sitting comfortably in the runner-up berth with 75 points, including 43 goals, and a 15-point margin over Reg Cherenko of Penicton.

Cougar coach Doug Anderson today was slightly worried over the condition of Evans, who was socked by the flu bug and missed Wednesday's workout. Grant is almost certain to be in action tonight but could be below his best skating form.

Due to return to the Victoria lineup is Len Barrie, out for about a month with Achilles tendon trouble. Although the tendon is still painful, the club trainer believes Barrie can get back to work and Len will probably see limited action against the Essos:

University Team Downs Nationals

DENVER (AP) — The University of Denver Pioneers scored four goals in the first two periods and defeated the Canadian Nationals 5-3 Friday night in an exhibition hockey game.

Goals by Tom Miller, Tom Gilmore and Don Thessen carried the Pioneers to an early lead before the Canadians came back. Gerry Pinder and Chuck Lefley brought the Nationals to within striking distance in the third period but Denver had too much of a lead.

Holmes Paces Attack As Oaks Batter Rams

Tom Holmes turned on a sparkling display of shooting skill Friday night to lead Oak Bay back into a first-place tie with Victoria High Totems in the Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League.

Holmes fired 25 points as the Oaks rolled to their ninth straight league victory and their 30th triumph of the season with a 60-36 ramble over Mount Douglas Rams.

Don Burgess added 15 points and Fergie Andison contributed 10 for the Oaks, who have played one less league game than the once-beaten Totems.

Lance Mar collected 13 points to pace the third-place Rams on attack.

Doubles Champs Top First Hurdle

Canadian champions Mimi Nilsson and Rolf Paterson cleared the first hurdle in their pursuit of the mixed doubles title in the B.C. open badminton championships Friday night when they rolled to a 15-4, 15-5 victory over Victorians Mary Jean Smith and Roger Lindal.

Also advancing through first-round matches at the Racquet Club was another highly-rated Vancouver pair—former national singles champions Alison Daysmith and Wayne Macdonnell, who combined for a 15-9, 15-4 triumph over the Victoria duo of Jean Wescott and John Meija.

Heavy firing in the star-studded tourney got under way this morning with first-round matches in open singles and doubles competition for men and women.

One open singles match was played Friday. In that one, Edmonton's Dave McReady defeated Victoria's Roy Coburn, 15-2, 15-0.

Macdonnell and current Canadian king Bruce Rollick are favored to earn berths in the men's singles final in tonight's semi-finals at the Racquet Club.

National singles queen Sharon Whittaker is seeded first in the women's section and is expected to receive her biggest challenges from Miss Daysmith and Judy Rollick.

Tonight's semis start at 7 and final will be played Sunday, beginning at noon.

Lesser Lights Shine In Downhill Events

GARIBALDI, B.C. (CP) — Previous injuries and unlucky spills on high speed sections of a tricky course Friday gave two relative unknowns victories in the men's and women's downhill events of the Canadian senior alpine ski championships.

"I still can't believe it," said Laurie Kreiner, 20, of Timmins, Ont., who won the 14,000-foot women's race in 2:40.9.

Her previous best downhill was a fifth in the Roche Cup races last weekend at Aspen, Colo.

Named at Christmas to Les Espoirs, Canada's junior national ski team, she handled herself like a veteran throughout the run, which dropped 2,400 feet.

Keith Shepherd of Waskesiu, Sask. won the men's 16,000-foot run in 2:52.58.

LUCKY TO WIN

Shepherd's task was made easier when favored Gerry Rinaldi, of Kimberley, B.C., fell on a high speed flat area of the course when he caught an edge of his ski on a mogul.

"It's nice to win," said Shepherd, "but, you know, if Rinaldi had finished, I think he would have beaten me. He usually does on tough courses like this.

Second in the men's downhill was Peter Duncan of Mont Tremblant, Que., in 2:54.62 while Dan Irwin of Fort William, Ont., was third in 2:55.06.

Sue Graves of Ottawa was runner-up in the women's downhill with a time of 2:43.23 and Judi Leinweber of Kimberley, B.C., was third in 2:44.00.

Today's schedule includes the giant slalom with 45 gates in the men's and women's run, both 6,000-feet long, with a vertical drop of 1,200 feet.

The shorter slalom events will be held Sunday, the women's over 2,800 feet with a vertical drop of 600 feet. The men's run drops 740 feet over a distance of 3,500 feet.

SENIOR BUTTONS

Royal Colwood's Larry McCooey and Roy Johnson were victorious in their first defence of the city senior golf buttons, downing Gorge Vale challengers Moke Morgan and Fred Clairmonte on the 17th hole at Victoria Golf Club.

Revoltan Tactics Incite Pott's Play

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—The $100,000 Tucson Open today told a story of two golfers named Johnny—one leading the field and the other, a star of more than a quarter century ago, who helped him do it.

Johnny Pott, 33, held a one-stroke lead at nine-under-par 135 going into third-round play today in quest of the $20,000 first prize.

George Knudson of Toronto, leading Canadian, shot a 70 Friday for a 143 total. He was followed by Bob Cox of Vancouver, 73-71—44.

Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver had a 74-71—145 while Al Balding of Toronto was at 72-74—146. Ken Fulton of Trail, B.C., and Montreal, followed at 73-79—152.

Pott hasn't won since the Bing Crosby tournament which opened the 1968 tour.

He wound up earning $40,335, the majority of that at the Crosby.

GETTING LESSONS

"It was my poorest year on the tour," he said. "I've been working on my game with Johnny Revolta."

Revolta, the Professional Golfers' Association champion of 1935, is teaching pro at the Tamarisk Country Club in Palm Springs, Calif.

Pott didn't reveal the advice but he did post a second-round score of 65 on the 7,305-yard Tucson National Country Club course Friday.

That was enough to give him the edge over Dale Douglass, who added a 69 to his opening 67 for 136.

U.S. Open champion Lee Trevino and first-round leader Miller Barber were tied at 137 following rounds of 70 and 72, respectively.

RESERVE CLAUSE . . . . . . NEXT TARGET

Owners Balk on Players' Pitch

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball's rebellious players, rebuffed on two new fronts in their pension battle with major league club owners, drew back today to await developments in the bitter dispute.

But Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association, indicated one of his courses of action in the future will be an assault on the reserve clause.

"It is time for the players to turn toward more fruitful channels—the courts and the federal government," Miller said Friday night.

"We must challenge the reserve clause. It is clearly unconstitutional and, corny as it might sound, un-American."

Miller brought up the reserve clause, which binds a player to one club during his professional career, after the owners' negotiating team successively:

1. Balked at the players' request for federal mediation.

2. Announced they will wait for the outcome of a mail ballot of all the players on a $5,300,000 pension offer, rejected earlier in the week by a 24-0 vote of the club player representatives.

3. Turned down the players' counter-proposal of a $5,900,000 package, midway between the owners' offer and the players' asking figure of $6,500,000.

"We have discussed the new player offer with all the members of our committee," said the owners' representative, John Gaherin. "And we have informed the association that it has been absolutely rejected. We will await the outcome of the poll of all the players."

Miller said most of the players will continue to boycott spring training camps until a settlement is reached "although the press has chosen to play up a few minor defections as an avalanche."

Miller said only 11 of some 400 association members had signed 1969 contracts as of Friday afternoon.

Stockers Step To Inside Rail

Stockers North Americans appear ready to pack away their first regular-season title in the Vancouver Island Hockey League after shocking University of Victoria Vikings Friday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Hammered 3-0 by the front-running Vikings in an exhibition clash Wednesday, Stockers displayed a startling reversal of form Friday and clobbered the students 5-1 before 1,120 fans.

Victory lifted Stockers one point in front of the Vikings and they can wrap up first place in final games of the schedule next week by downing the trailing Queen's Own Rifles.

Terry Foreman of Vikings and Errol Goulden of Stockers traded goals in the opening period before Ernie Carley and Jim Shkwarok took over scoring chores for the winners. Shkwarok and Carley each counted a goal in each of the final two sessions of the rugged game.

Rifles came from behind three times while playing Butler Brothers in Friday's other game to finish with a 4-4 tie.

Ron Cooke sent Butlers ahead for the third time at 17:39 of the final period but Dave Stones came back about a minute later to score on a pass from Len Desjardins to give Rifles the deadlock.

California Champs Lose To Shawnigan

California's high school rugby champion, The Harvard School, suffered its first defeat of the season Friday, losing an 11-9 decision to Shawnigan Lake School at Brentwood College.

Bill Sleath was the scoring star for Shawnigan, scoring two trys and adding the convert that provided the margin of victory after the clubs were deadlocked 6-6 at half time.

Mark Hall collected another try for Shawnigan while Andy Frazier booted two penalty goals and Jeff Koziel added a try for the tourists.

The Californians were slated to meet Claremont High School today at Macdonald Park.

Finlay, Leps Score Wins At New York

NEW YORK (CP) — Olympic runners Ergas Leps and Bob Finlay of Toronto turned on final bursts of speed to capture two events at the United States invitational track meet Friday.

Leps broke out of a six-man pack with a lap to go and nipped pacesetter Chris Mason of Villanova in two minutes, 27.1 seconds in the 1,000-metre event.

Finlay won the 3,000-metre run, covering the distance in 7:59 and edged Barry Brown of New York by .2 seconds.

Another Toronto runner, Abby Hoffman, challenged Tennessee state champion Madeline Manning in the women's 800-metre event, but finished two strides behind in 2:09.4. The winning time was 2:09.1.

SOCCER GENERALS FOLD

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Generals have informed the North American Soccer League they will not operate this year.

MONTREAL DROPS OUT OF LACROSSE LEAGUE

TORONTO (CP)—A revamped National Lacrosse Association, dropping Montreal Canadiens, will be announced by March 15, league headquarters said Friday.

Terry Kelly, NLA president, said fan reaction to professional lacrosse has been so good that several areas—including Rochester, N.Y.—have applied for the Montreal franchise. Montreal dropped out because it was unable to make arrangements to use the Forum.

REPRESENTING British Columbia in Canadian seniors' curling championship, which starts Monday at Hamilton, will be this Victoria Curling Club rink. Leaving Friday on quest for national crown were (left to right) lead Joe Leibel, second Laurie Perlette, third Dick Pick and skip Gordie Moore, who captured provincial title earlier this month.

Saskatchewan's 10th Title As Miller Rink Hits Mark

NORTH BATTLEFORD, Sask. (CP)—Bob Miller, a Grade 12 student from Shellbrook, achieved his main goal Friday when he won the Canadian schoolboy curling championship.

But the Saskatchewan skip said his next goal "is to represent the province in the Canadian men's championship."

Miller and his mates of vice-skip Roger Rask, second Lloyd Helm and lead Bill Aug finished with a 9-1 record in the 11-rink round-robin tournament, watched by more than 14,000 fans.

"We only had four good games, that is curling up to our potential," said Miller. "But I'll take the championship anyway we can get it. I think we proved we deserved the title."

SHARE SECOND

Manitoba skip Bill Henry of Winnipeg and Alberta entry John Anderson of Sedgewick shared second place with 7-3 records.

In fourth place was George Cox of Renfrew, skip of the Ontario rink, and Grant MacDonald of Whitehorse, who represented British Columbia, with 5-5 marks.

Saskatchewan won two games Friday in easy fashion but the Shellbrook boys were hard-pressed in earlier play Wednesday and needed two steal victories to remain in contention.

In two other games, Miller had to rally in late ends to pick up victories.

10TH CANADIAN TITLE

It was the 10th national title for Saskatchewan since the tournament began in 1947 and the first time the province has captured the title in four tries while playing host to the schoolboys.

Shellbrook, with a population of 1,330, is 105 miles northeast of North Battleford.

In 11th-round play, Saskatchewan tripped British Columbia 8-4, Nova Scotia whipped Newfoundland 17-1, Manitoba downed Prince Edward Island 10-6, Quebec nipped Northern Ontario 9-7 and Alberta defeated Ontario 9-5. New Brunswick had the bye.

In the 10th round, Saskatchewan beat Northern Ontario 13-6, Alberta trounced Newfoundland 15-3, Ontario topped Prince Edward Island 9-6, Manitoba surprised New Brunswick 10-7 and British Columbia nipped Nova Scotia 8-6. The bye went to Quebec.

Lunde Continues Hot Scoring Run

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Vancouver Canucks crept to within one point of league-leading Portland Friday night as Len Lunde continued his goal-scoring spree in engineering a 7-1 Western Hockey League victory over Seattle.

Playing before 9,362 fans in Vancouver, the Canucks spotted the Totems a 1-0 lead and then went to work. Lunde scored two of the markers after scoring three in Thursday night's 6-4 win over Phoenix.

In the loop's other contest, 2,395 fans in Denver saw the hometown Spurs pop in two third-period goals to salvage a 3-3 tie with Portland.

Lunde's goals were his 21st and 22nd of the season. Other Vancouver goal-getters were Bryan Hextall, Andy Bathgate, Jim McKenny, Bob Barlow and Duke Harris.

Guyle Fielder was the lone Seattle marksman, scoring his 6th goal of the season.

In Denver, Billy Carter and Gord Vejprava scored a minute apart midway through the final frame to give the Spurs the draw with the Bucks.

Ed Hoekstra gave Denver a 1-0 lead early in the first period but it was washed out by successive goals by Portland's Bill Saunders, Dick Van Impe and Norm Johnson.

BRAWLING STUDENTS . . .

. . . MAR TEST MATCH

Cowdrey Cool One in Riotous Test

LAHORE, Pakistan (Reuters)—Captain Colin Cowdrey Friday scored one of the most memorable centuries of his career to save England from collapse on the opening day of the first cricket test against Pakistan.

It was memorable not so much for his stroke play but for his remarkable concentration despite constant noise and crowd demonstrations as England hit 226 for five before bad light stopped play 17 minutes early.

Throughout the day students and other teen-agers fought among themselves. They disregarded police orders and trampled over the wicket during the lunch and tea intervals before finally holding a chair-hurling battle.

The battle broke out when Cowdrey was dismissed, one ball after completing his 22nd test century in four hours with 12 fours. As the England skipper walked off, students near the pavilion started throwing chairs at each other.

Cowdrey reached the boundary, saw the flying chairs, then turned and waved for Basil d'Oliveria, the other England batsman at the wicket, to come off the field. D'Oliveira started walking but was held back by Aftab Gull, a Lahore student leader making his test debut for Pakistan.

Fighting stopped as students ran from the scene and eventually Alan Knott came out to carry on the England innings.

Paisley Fails to Get Display of Strength

By CY FOX

BELFAST (CP) — The much-anticipated official climax to the Belfast campaign of boisterous Rev. Ian Paisley has turned out to be much less than a massive display of election strength.

Police estimated that between 200 and 500 Paisley supporters, a number of them teen-agers chanting and dancing to ceremonial flutes and drums, braved Friday night's cold winds in a procession which took Paisley through two city constituencies being contested in Monday's Northern Ireland general election.

Beaming and waving, the big clergyman rode in the parade's place of honor—high up on a large yellow truck. With him on the vehicle were two candidates of his Protestant Unionist party in the Belfast ridings of Victoria and Bloomfield.

Ahead of him marched his enthusiastic backers clutching Union Jacks and a few of them sporting orange sashes as traditional tokens of militant Ulster Protestantism.

OTHERS CAMPAIGN

As the Paisley procession coursed through Belfast, other Northern Ireland politicians were making late election appeals in ridings across the six counties. They resume campaigning today and some are expected to continue Sunday. But Paisley and strict Protestants generally say they will adhere to traditional practice and abstain from such work on the sabbath.

The campaign as a whole has been relatively free of violence and police said there were no incidents during the Paisley parade Friday night.

Loudspeakers boomed out slogans denouncing Prime Minister Terence O'Neill as—among other things—a man intent on "selling out" Northern Ireland to the Roman Catholic Church.

But the refrain generally was less violent, except when customers ran out from pubs along the several-mile parade route to shout "no surrender." This is the perennial Protestant shout of defiance, originating in the period of 17th-century religious conflict which surrounded the birth of modern Ulster.

PLANS BIG RALLY

Tonight, Paisley will hold what is billed as a big rally in Bannside, the constituency northwest of Belfast, which he is contesting against O'Neill.

O'Neill called the election suddenly this month when a strong section of his Protestant following in the legislature rebelled at his policy of reconciliation with Ulster's minority Roman Catholics.

The election has developed into a confused mish-mash as seats are contested by pro-O'Neill and anti-O'Neill candidates of the governing Unionist party, members of the Nationalists (Catholic) and splinter groups such as Paisley's newly-created organization with only five candidates.

Opinion polls give O'Neill a good chance of strengthening his hand but cutting the number of dissident House members in his party, which will unquestionably get a majority of the 52 seats in the Ulster Parliament.

At dissolution, the standing was: Unionists 37, Nationalists 9, Northern Ireland Labor 2, Republican Labor 2, Liberals 1, others 1.

Log Famine May Cause Shutdowns

VANCOUVER (CP)—Closures and unemployment appear inevitable in British Columbia coast forest industry manufacturing plants, John M. Billings, president of Forest Industrial Relations, said Friday.

He made the prediction after the International Woodworkers of America declined to recommend overtime to its members to reduce a log shortage caused by a harsh winter and deep snow. The union has said there are thousands of laid-off workers available for extra work.

The IWA replied by asking forest companies "to explore the possibility of increasing log inventories, on a local union-company basis by means other than extending the work day or work week."

Mr. Billings said the companies are prepared to do this but felt little could be accomplished without overtime work.

The IWA met industry officials Friday and Wednesday to seek an explanation of the log supply situation.

Leftist Seeks Ayub's Job

AYUB
. . . big shoes to fill

KARACHI (AP) — Leftist leader Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who danced for joy Friday when President Mohammad Ayub Khan announced he will not seek a third term in 1970, is preparing to bid for the presidency of Pakistan.

The former foreign minister, who was released from three months detention last week, said he might fly to Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, for weekend talks with other opposition leaders to prepare for elections next January.

Bhutto was reported eager to meet with Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, chief of the rightist Awami League party in East Pakistan, and Maulana Bhashani, head of the pro-Peking wing of the National Awami party.

Bhutto, 41, head of the People's party and a symbol of opposition to Ayub's regime during Pakistan's three months of civil strife, said Ayub's withdrawal was a "victory for the people" and would herald the "restoration of democracy."

But unrest continued in some cities. Eight persons were reported killed and 27 injured in Khulna when police fired on a mob setting fire to a government minister's home. The army was called in to enforce a curfew.

YOUTHS ON RAMPAGE

Before Ayub's announcement Friday, mobs of youths rampaged through Dacca commemorating the Bengali language riots of 1952. The demonstrators, barefoot in tribute to the 50 people killed, roamed the city insisting that everyone else go barefoot too.

Several foreigners, mainly Britons, were hauled from their cars and made to take off their shoes.

One of these was Associated Press correspondent Brian Calvert.

Students armed with iron bars, clubs and rocks smashed windows at the U.S. consulate and attacked other buildings which had English-language signs. Most foreigners stayed home, while troops guarded city offices, the airport and the High Court building.

When news of Ayub's step-down was broadcast, cheering crowds clustered around radios at street corners and parked cars. Black flags were hoisted in mock mourning for Ayub's regime.

Opposition leaders, who had called Ayub a tyrant, said his decision not to run was "statesmanlike."

Ayub came to power in a bloodless military coup in October, 1958, sending President Iskander Mirza into exile. He was re-elected twice, but opponents say that Ayub and his advisers had lost touch with the people.

His regime helped Pakistan maintain a healthy rate of economic progress, but disparity between top-level society and the working mass continued. Three months ago the crisis began when students went on a rampage in Lahore, Karachi and other cities, demanding a better deal from Ayub.

He Put Pakistan Back on It s Feet

RAWALPINDI, Pakistan (Reuters) — President Mohammad Ayub Khan, 61, who announced Friday he would not seek re-election, ruled the republic of Pakistan with little opposition from 1958 until political disturbances late last year challenged his reign.

His rule, following a bloodless military coup, introduced a number of reforms and put the country's economy on its feet with help from both Western and Communist countries.

One of his first acts after replacing Gen. Iskander Mirza as president was to introduce a plan of "basic democracy." This provided for the election of 120,000 "basic Democrats" who in turn voted for the president and legislature in this nation of 125,000,000 population.

Opposition to Ayub's rule began in October, 1968, and built up into riots in East and West Pakistan between the government and some 10 different opposition groups representing pro-Moscow followers, pro-Peking men, and blocs to the right of both these groups.

Ayub, a field marshal, is a devout Moslem and family man. He was born May 14, 1907, at Rehana, a Himalayan foothill village in what was then British India, the son of a non-commissioned officer in the British Indian Army.

Ayub was one of the few Indians selected in 1926 for training at Sandhurst, Britain's royal military college.

WENT TO TOP

In 1951, four years after the sub-continent was divided into India and Pakistan, Ayub became the first Pakistani to hold the post of army commander-in-chief.

He completely reorganized and re-equipped the army. He learned a great deal about international politics in helping to form the Baghdad pact, Later known as the Central Treaty Organization, and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

A domestic political crisis in 1954 lifted Ayub to the post of defence minister. Two years later, Pakistan got a new constitution with Mirza as president, but in 1958, the army took over and Mirza proclaimed martial law.

Ayub was appointed chief martial law administrator and supreme military commander. Three weeks later Mirza resigned and Ayub became president by proclamation—the "strong man" ruler.

After a "basic Democrat" vote in 1960, Ayub was sworn in as Pakistan's first elected president and was re-elected in 1965.

Ayub was born into a family of Pathan warriors, he counts among his forebears a local hero blown from the muzzle of a vengeful British cannon.

The future president studied at Algarn Moslem University and his brilliant scholastic record enabled him to be chosen for Sandhurst.

His years in England influenced his personal manners. His English is fluent and peppered with references to "You chaps."

DETAILS RARE

Religion and record books for 1959 list four sons and three daughters. Moslem leaders rarely give personal family details of their life.

As a Sandhurst-trained soldier, Ayub was a major asset to the embryonic forces of an independent Pakistan at odds with neighboring India over Kashmir and other issues.

At the time of the India-Pakistan division, Ayub, who served in the 14th Punjab Regiment, became a brigadier. A year later, he was a major-general in command of East Pakistan.

His later posts as defence minister and martial law administrator made Ayub the most likely successor to Mirza.

Ten years of Ayub's rule under limited democracy was celebrated Oct. 27, 1968, with the official title "A decade of reforms" to mark the country's economic progress.

He said then he stepped from a military life into politics "because a perfectly sound nation had been turned into a laughing stock."

'Heart of London' Transplanted Here

At The Gallery

By TED LINDBERG

The attractive thing about the exhibition "Heart of London," I suppose one must inevitably add in parentheses: (Ontario), is the feeling that this group of young artists, heralded across Canada as a new concentration of creative vitality, has triumphed on its own terms in a place of its own choosing.

Lindberg

Opened last Thursday at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, the show, although much too large to be crammed into one room, (albeit, the new wing's largest ...), is arranged adjacent to and in full view of an exhibit of Kashmir and Paisley shawls. This is one of the less fortunate compromises this Gallery has made, trying to keep everyone happy. In this case, the juxtaposition of the two shows is positively bizarre, pointing up if nothing else the war of worlds that separates generations.

"Heart of London" easily deserves all three galleries of the new wing, which it was not allotted; the Paisleys, more appropriately, should have been shown at the Maltwood Museum, which concerns itself with these scintillating aspects of the Arts and Crafts Movement.

Contrary to the Pop or neo-Dada format of the London catalogue, a zany bilingual comic-book view of the artists in their natural habitat (published by the National Gallery), the works are by no means restricted to levity and games.

Some are deeply involved in constructivist or formal abstract problems, the opposite extremes.

Like the New York art recently witnessed at the Vancouver Art Gallery, there is a strange tolerance or equanimity among these people, which is pleasing. Here, at last, the lion lies down with the lamb.

"Then why not Pop and Paisleys?" one may ask ... to which I can only answer: the distinction is too droll.

The group, 11 of them, are here-and-now types who seem to have changed the complexion of their town, judging from all the publicity they have received. Canada is so hungry for heroes! They would instantly be dubbed The Group of Eleven by some pundit, if they could be stylistically linked, but they resist that linkage as they would resist any other attempt to draw them into a wholly "rational" world.

They live in spiritual accord, which is enough, and as well indulge themselves with a home-grown Nihilist Spasm Band (Canada's answer to the Fugs), and publish a house organ called Twenty Cents Magazine. All in all, London (Ont.) may have developed more swingers per capita than London (Eng.).

The most empathetic people in the group, for me, do happen to be the Pop-Dada artists, because they must have borne the brunt of the hostility that orginally faced them there. Several of them invite real confrontation, concerning social values as well as aesthetic debates.

Greg Curnoe is literary and romantic, as well as technically facile. He is a man-child who enjoys the best of both possible worlds, his work-play is as natural as breathing — suggesting the ideal existence of a Summerhill alumni who has permanently evaded The System.

He paints, does constructions and collages, prints out messages with rubber stamps; records images and essence right out of the air, his visual and social surroundings. His is a three-dimensional diary with little held back.

Working along similar lines, John Boyle paints human images on plywood, cuts them out, stands them up, paints them around the back, hinges on appendages, and paints them too. His symbolism is social and political for the most part, the paint impastoed in raw colors.

If Boyle painted in a traditional manner, he would merely be bad; but it's what he does with poorly painted images that makes him good — he breathes life into a welter of newspaper and magazine photos, combines them in a sureal montage (not unlike the combined impact of all the stories contained on the front page of this paper) and invites your reaction.

Tony Urquhart, also being featured this month at Pandora's Box, is a painter-sculptor, a constructionist, who impressed me strongly with his three-dimensional landscapes, really important new approaches to a timeless subject.

"Opening Box, Black 1968" is literally a landscape built on the interior of a box with four hinged facades. When the facades are drawn open, the piece becomes sculpture that has been turned inside-out.

"Two Hills" achieves much the same effect without moving parts. One form describes two situations: a "living" hill and a "barren" hill, back to back; but from the sides, one is disoriented as everything seems to take a 90-degree flip, and there remains only one hill. This obviously has to be seen, but remember what I have said.

Another superb illusionist is Bev Kelly, who does construction-paintings of windows.

"I just came across the idea when I was working out some compositions," she says, "... the first windows were 'idea' paintings; now most are models of real windows."

"These windows aren't 'real' windows; they are still paintings. They are not made like real windows, though they may look real ... they don't have sashes, and you can't see through them. A real window is to look through, these are to look at."

Nonetheless, the imagery in the "glass" is a credible, haunting evocation, deja vu, although it neither reflects the present interior nor transmits the wall against which it rests.

Jack Chambers' silver and gray Pop paintings are interesting technical problems, similar to uses of white on white; but his most affecting work is "The Heart of London, 1968", a superlative pencil and oil drawing on acrylic sheet (which I originally mistook for photomural), which enlarges news photos recording a deer chase in the centre of the city. In transposition, the drama has somehow taken on a pathos which one doubts was present when the pictures were employed as news copy.

There is a huge biomorphic shape, beautifully finished in epoxy on fiberglass, by Walt Redinger. Green-yellow and highly reflective, it shimmers near the window-wall at the end of the gallery, asking no questons and telling no lies; simply, benignly inviting circumambulation.

Murray Favro's visual illustrations of the words "SPROING" and "CLUNK" do just this, although noiselessly and statically. They are interesting if the words amuse you.

Ron Martin is the most competent abstract painter in the show, and probably the most serious-minded, although the present atmosphere mainly works against him. I find his formal collages and paintings somewhat antiseptic, and his minimalist works and philosophy after the fact.

Minimalists David and Royden Rabinowitch and Edward Zelenak (with the biggest piece in the show, a fibreglass tube in the shape of a life raft) are also represented, but by nothing substantially innovative.

The entire affair is to be musically accompanied by sounds of the Nihilist Spasm Band, presumably, to recreate conditions under which these artworks were conceived.

If you are over 30, take a child along as a guide.

MUNRO
. . . final fling

Journalist Plans North Pole Jump

OTTAWA (CP) — A Second World War Spitfire pilot and peacetime parachutist plans to make his 500th—and final—jump over the North Pole late next month.

Ray Muhro, a former newspaper man now living in Lancaster, Ont., near Cornwall, says he will hang up his chute after the polar jump and will also quit flying, after a 30-year career.

A statement issued here today by Robert Christie Associates Ltd. of Montreal, said timing of the jump will depend on weather conditions. The venture will be launched from Ward Hunt Island, 500 miles south of the pole.

Polar pilot Weldon W. Phipps will fly a ground party to the pole and return to pick up Munro and the party after the jump.

Mr. Munro, in his late 40s, told officials of the northern development department the expedition will be the culmination of five years of study and 499 paradrops "to determine the psychological and physiological effects" on a parachutist jumping under abnormal conditions.

The department has issued Mr. Munro with the necessary expeditionary permit to make the jump and to allow an aircraft to fly in a two-man support team to establish a base camp at the pole.

School Concert At Gordon Head

Ninth annual spring concert will be staged March 4 and 5 by Gordon Head Junior Secondary School.

It will take the form of a variety concert and will involve drama groups, the choir, band and others.

The concert will take place at the school on Gordon Head Road.

Going to Start Collecting?

Stamp News

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Once you have decided what you wish to collect in stamps, you are then ready to proceed intelligently in the matter. You should start a simple collection with good but inexpensive equipment which can be purchased from practically any stamp dealer.

Obtaining stamps is relatively simple. They can be removed from your mail by soaking the paper in cold water until they are loose. Since everyday mail bears the common varieties, soon you will no doubt want to purchase stamps. Many dealers sell mixtures of used stamps which are still on paper; these of course are cheaper than those which have been washed from envelopes.

Whatever you save in postage stamps, I believe that the following items are required:

A guidebook containing information on many aspects of the study and collection of stamps. The Stamp Collector's Handbook by Samuel Grossman answers just about every imaginable question concerning stamps.

HOUSE FOR STAMPS

A stamp album: a house for your stamps. These can be obtained for the world or for the stamps of practically any one country. Buy a simple, illustrated album to begin with.

A magnifying glass: a necessary item for carefully inspecting stamps.

Stamp tongs: a special tweezer for handling stamps. This instrument should not have sharp ends such as ordinary tweezers so that your stamps won't be damaged in handling them. Tongs should be used as much as possible.

Hinges: transparent, gummed pieces of paper for correctly mounting stamps. (Peelable, prefolded hinges are best.) Never remove a wet hinge from a stamp; wait until it's dry. Don't use glue, tape or ordinary gummed paper for mounting stamps. For expensive stamps, use transparent, plastic mounts. When propertly inserted into a mount, a stamp is well protected, and can be examined without actually touching it.

Stamp catalogue: a valuable reference book for identifying and pricing stamps. (The prices listed are meant as a guide and reflect the market conditions.) I suggest Scott's Standard Postage Stamp Catalogue—it's printed in two volumes and in a combined edition listing the world. A revised edition is issued annually. (Read the preface carefully; it contains useful information.) If you collect only Canada, Great Britain or the United States, individual catalogues for these countries can be bought. A brand-new catalogue is not necesary for beginners in most cases.

STUDY IN DEPTH

Stock book: a storehouse for duplicate stamps. The pages in these books have rows of pockets into which stamps can be inserted, and held in place without the use of hinges.

When you begin to study stamps in more depth, a watermark detector and a perforation gauge will be needed. (More about these items in a future column.) At this time I suggest that you read some general postal history.

Down Under Is Ready to Blast Upwards

By WILL GRIMSLEY

SYDNEY (AP) — "These Australian men!" a pretty Sydney colleen pouted. "The first thing in their lives is beer — then horse racing, then any kind of gambling and, finally, women.

"Did you ever see such a cockeyed nonsense of values?"

Australia, the sprawling, robust continent at the bottom of the world, has many of the traits of the men who inhabit her. She is sun-baked and tough, adventuresome with a deep-seated lust for living, a trifle lazy and mixed up about what she wants, where she wants to go and how to get there.

"Australia is on a launching pad just ready to blast off," says Fred Kovaleski, a young American businessman from Hamtramck, Mich., who has lived in the country since 1962. "Her future is limitless. I predict that in 15 or 20 years there will be a boom down here such as you've never seen before."

William Crook, the last United States ambassador to Canberra appointed by Lyndon B. Johnson, agrees.

PEOPLE ARE GUTTY

"This is a very gutty place and these are very gutty people," says Crook. "Australia has nothing but future.

"If some men should come down from the moon, spin the globe and decide where they wanted to take root, they would have to choose Australia.

"This is a bridge linking the two great commercial empires, the East and West — three, actually, when you consider the Far East. Australia is strategically located to become a new world leader — socially, economically, politically.

"The Indian Ocean will be the next Mediterranean."

Many people thousands of miles away think of Australia as a primitive, undeveloped outland territory where kangaroos hop through the main streets, koala bears nibble eucalyptus leaves in the village square and glistening black aboriginies frolic with head-splitting boomerangs.

This is a ludicrously false image.

Sydney, where Capt. Arthur Phillip set up the first settlement in 1788, is a city of glass and steel skyscrapers. It is a thriving cosmopolitan metropolis of 2,500,000 people with modern hotels, mushrooming office buildings and King's Cross, where the arty, the mods and visitors celebrate Mardi Gras 365 nights of the year.

STRICT LIQUOR LAWS

Yet two blocks off the main thoroughfares Australia takes on the look of an old western town in North America with balconies hanging over the aged store fronts. You can still get fish and chips wrapped in yesterday's newspaper on Castlereigh and Pitt Streets in the heart of Sydney.

Liquor laws in Australia are still restrictive but the Aussies manage to keep their thirst satisfied.

Commented another American businessman with ties in the country:

"The trouble with Australia is that she has adopted the worst of two cultures. She has taken the traditions of the English and the values of America."

WON'T FORGET YANKS

Pictures of Queen Elizabeth hang in hotel foyers and other public places. At formal banquets, it is still a breach of ettiquette to light a cigarette before the toast to the Queen.

Yet many Australians deride the British, whom they refer to as "Pommies," and they don't hide their admiration for the Americans, whom they emulate.

.. Melbourne pubkeeper attempted to explain the phenomenon:

"During the Second World War when the Japs were threatening to crawl up our backs and we were yelling for help, who came to our rescue? Not the Pommies. The Yanks, that's who, and the Aussies have never forgotten it."

Australia has escaped racial turmoil, perhaps due in part to the tight restriction on Asians and Africans admitted to the country. Last year only 2,000 Asians and Africans were accepted, these largely practitioners, scientists, engineers and teachers.

SFU Board Rejects Threat Probe

BURNABY (CP) — The board of governors of Simon Fraser University has decided it will not investigate allegations that faculty members have been harassed and threatened by radicals.

Richard E. Lester, board chairman, who already had said he thought investigation pointless so late after the alleged events, said the decision was made "upon the information available." He did not elaborate.

Prof. D. G. Bettison disclosed last week that threateing telephone calls had been made to his wife last year before he resigned as head of the department of political science, sociology and anthropology.

Later, four other men who are or were faculty members of the same department said they had been harassed by radicals on the suburban Vancouver campus and branded by them as "reactionary bastards."

The board had agreed to discuss the issue Thursday but Mr. Lester said there wasn't much point in an investigation. He asked how the board could trace telephone calls made six months ago.

This Emerald Isle Is in Tropics

PLYMOUTH, Montserrat — In even the most primitive of the Caribbean islands today, new resort hotels are either being built or there is much talk about them going to be built.

In Montserrat, one of the smallest islands of the lot, the building boom has taken the form of new homes for visitors who came, saw, and were conquered by the island's charm and easy way of life.

Among the homes being built are handsome two-level units with terraces, verandas and pools. Some are located on hillsites overlooking the sea; others are adjacent to fine beaches. All are solid-looking, as they should be, building bylaws being tougher here than they are in Canada.

The island has no large elaborate hotels. There is a casual one in this capital town of Plymouth, a small motel on the outskirts of town, and a cottage complex with pool to the north. Several smaller hotels offer bargain rates and real West Indian living complete with crowing roosters and chickens around the driveway.

'EMERALD ISLE'

Montserrat, like Ireland, calls itself the Emerald Isle. Whether it was so dubbed by homesick Irish settlers who arrived here years ago or because of the green mantle covering the island, no one seems to know.

Shaped like a harp, the island has many traces of Irish heritage. The coat of arms includes a harp and cross. A shamrock decorates the facade of Government House and another the exterior of St. Patrick's Roman Catholic Church. Around the island Irish place names abound: Carr's, Fogharty, Cork Hill, Kinsale, Galway, Sweeney.

Potatoes are supplanting sea island cotton as a major crop and, like Ireland, Montserrat produces delicious tomatoes.

A graduate of the University of British Columbia heads the agricultural station and his department is studying soil fertility and livestock improvement. The soil on the whole is rich and Montserrat products sell well in other islands. The ambition of the department today is to make the island the breadbasket of the Caribbean.

Some visitors claim they can detect an Irish lilt in Montserratian speech. Perhaps. What is certain is that there exists a distinctive Montserratian pronunciation. It was some time before we realized that "Grate Ass" or "Gret As," as it is frequently spelled and generally called, is the Great Alps Waterfall, one of the scenic wonders of the Caribbean. This spectacular tumble of water is in the south of the island.

Canadian accents can be just as confusing to a Montserratian. Wondering about the incense tree, which is found up on the Galway hills, we asked our driver, "What is the incense tree you have here?" He replied that it was a "kind of belly-ache."

After puzzling over his answer for a few minutes we decided that he must have thought we had asked, "What is dysentery?" From someone else later on we learned the wood from the tree is used for church incense.

Fieldstone and native woods decorate the $2 million commons block, to open shortly at the University of Victoria. With locker, study, recreation, office and dining facilities, it will eventually accommodate 2,000, serving members of two adjacent colleges. For the present it will be used by the 1,000 students of Craigdarroch College. The six residential units which will be part of Lansdowne College are now under construction. Wood warms the interior of the dining room and the first meals will be served there March 3. The commons block will be opened Tuesday by J. B. Clearihue, chancellor emeritus, with faculty, students and staff having a preview tour after the brief ceremony. The university's college system aims at countering the impersonality of a huge establishment by providing smaller units around which student activities can centre.

TONI TONED DOWN

Did Too Much Lip Zipper the Blab?

By Ed Gould

TONI HEPBURN AND HILDE HARRISON
. . . a slight delay in publication

The Bench School Blab has suspended publication until further notice and it's unlikely that things around the Cowichan Bay elementary school will ever be quite the same.

The Blab began two years and eight issues ago with an announcement by editor David Nash that, "Only a few people are proud of the Blab. It gives them a feeling of responsibility and togetherness."

The paper contained an editorial on school spirit, a word of encouragement from principal John Rickaby, advice to the lovelorn and a column by "Young Ralph" on civilians in Viet Nam: "Quite a few are hurt by Napalm bombs."

Classified ads looked for homes for cats and rabbits; two cartoons — looking suspiciously as though they were traced from this newspaper; and an essay on the importance of developing a good memory ("so I won't forget and fall asleep during a boring lecture") completed the first issue.

The Blab took on a new look under the editorship of vibrant Toni Hepburn, a 12-year-old fireball who has distinct attitudes toward life and The Establishment that students usually keep under control until they get into university. Her approach was humorous.

PANTY GIRDLE

"Mr. Rickaby wears a panty girdle," one issue proclaimed on the front page. "Get This Issue In Case You Need Tissue," advised another. The irreverent tone didn't get past the cover at first and inside there continued to be mundane reports from classes and interviews with the new teachers.

The restless young editor felt a need for involvement in extra-curricular events so The Blab sponsored a successful fish derby in which there were more prizes donated than fish caught. One boy got a prize for a two-ounce bullhead which had to be weighed on a postage scale.

The Blab regularly featured contests for the best liar in the school; Bonanza contests for prizes, and candy sales at noon hour to defray the costs of printing and to pay for the prizes. With 70 to 100 copies at five cents each, it soon became an established entity in the 200-student school.

Typing was done by Toni's mother — Mrs. Don Hepburn, a former daily newspaper reporter — and the sheet was run off on a Gestetner in the staff room at Bench school. Then the graffiti hit the wall.

With permission from the janitor, Toni toured both boys and girls washrooms in search of journalistic prose, pencil and paper at the ready. The results of her efforts appeared in the next issue and there was such a run on copies a teacher finally decided to read it himself.

The Blab featured a Laugh-In style graffiti wall with such choice gems as: "Don't be embarrassed—even the queen looks funny in your position." And, "Don't you think you better get dressed before you leave?"

The offending page was removed by school authorities and a few complaints came in from parents who took the time out to read the paper. Editor Hepburn admits a certain amount of privy poet licence crept into her mockup of the outhouse wall.

However, Mr. Rickaby—who must have the best sense of humor since we said Goodbye Mr. Chips—maintains it wasn't the content of the page that forced the censorship as much as the impression it gave of dirty washrooms. "To my knowledge, the washroom walls are always kept clear," he says.

TENSION

The Blab was allowed to continue publication and went into its second year in September but signs of strain started to show.

The rift between editor and school authorities widened and circulation rose with the introduction of a Rowan and Martin approach complete with psychedelic cover and chicken jokes.

Some jokes were funny—"Help keep Asia illiterate. Send each person a Blab." Some were not—"Queen Elizabeth is a Negro. Hitler was a Jew. Prime Minister Wilson is overweight."

Meanwhile, the psychedelia began to go wild. Anyone who had the patience to read the writing that twisted snakelike across the feature page would have discovered: "As you can see, this paper is very blabby and deals with everything except sex simply because it is forbidden in the school."

AXE FALLS

A short meeting was held between newspaper staff and school officials recently after more complaints came in from parents. Publication was suspended. For how long is anybody's guess. Mr. Rickaby says the suspension has nothing to do with censorship but because certain members of the editorial department have let their school work fall behind in preference to extra-curricular activities.

Toni Hepburn and her assistant Hilde Harrison, also 12, report they will have another issue hot for the press in about two weeks. Toni says school officials have told her "to delay publication for the time being" and admits there have been recurrent requests in a suggestion box installed for students' comments.

"All they do is suggest I quit," she said.

In any event, Toni hopes to graduate to George Bonner school next term. The question is—Is George Bonner school ready for Toni Hepburn?

CZECH IMMIGRANTS SETTLING INTO A NEW LIFE

Designing a Future on Optimism

By ALAN WHITE

VLASTIMIL
. . . imagination

Vlastimil Plsek is half way to realizing a dream he brought here from Czechoslovakia last fall.

It's just four months since he and his wife fled their homeland and decided on Victoria as the place for a new life. The dream came along as a vaguely-defined wish.

Mr. Plsek, 46, is a commercial designer who spent more than 11 years as a guest of the state doing forced labor in a radium mine for "disagreeing."

When he arrived here on a cloudy day in late October, he told The Times he wanted eventually to continue his design work.

But first he had to settle into a new life.

NEW JOB, APARTMENT

Today, four months later, he has a job and a new apartment, on Cook St. And he has plans.

These are recent developments which have occurred in a few brief weeks. It wasn't that comfortable to begin with. Mr. Plsek (his name is pronounced Pilsek and friends call him Bob) landed here with his wife Viteszlava, 38, with nothing.

The couple carried a suitcase and owned the clothes on their backs. All else had been left behind, but for a few small samples of Mr. Plsek's work that fitted easily into his pockets.

It was Oct. 21, and they had no idea what would happen to them in the days ahead. Despite all that Mr. Plsek had a direct and eager smile in his eyes and spoke with optimism.

Federal government officials and members of the tiny Czech community in Victoria began organizing their first weeks in Canada.

LONG, HARD HOURS

Since then, the couple has lived in a basement flat in Oak Bay and in a motel. Until very recently, neither had found work.

Now Mr. Plsek is employed by an industrial plastics firm and his wife works as kitchen help in a city boys' school.

Both work long and hard hours. They have a lot to catch up.

Three weeks ago they took an apartment of their own, and began to furnish it.

A visit to their home recently found them positive and hopeful they can achieve what they want.

Mr. Plsek served his guest from a large tray of open-face European sandwiches, covered in bits of cheese and sausage. He made Turkish coffee, blended in France, because he hasn't become accustomed to the taste of North American coffee.

FUTURE COMES FIRST

He didn't talk about the past, until questioned directly. He preferred to talk about his future, and his hopes.

Mr. Plsek was trained and experienced as a designer when he arrived in Canada, and wants to put his skill to use in Victoria.

In his spare time he has continued making jewellery from polished wood and plexiglass. Modern materials and designs fascinate him.

But he is more interested in interior design and decoration, he said. If he can one day find a market for his work, he will begin turning it out in earnest.

Eventually, with luck and hard work—probably more of the latter—he would like to have a small plant turning out interior fittings and wall designs steadily.

. . . luck, hard work

It might even be a place to offer jobs to other Czech immigrants with artistic talents, he speculates.

CAREFUL PLANNING

But the dream is still only that, and the first steps towards realizing it will involve a great deal of imagination and careful planning.

Mr. Plsek turned out one design in six hours on a recent Saturday, working over a hot stove melting and shaping plexiglass scraps.

The result was a striking wall plaque four feet long in contrasting color and design—white curved and folded plastic on a glossy black base.

He already has tentative partnership with another city resident and friend, a former Czech who came to Canada 17 years ago and now operates a rest home.

ALSO A BELIEVER

Frank Lochovsky is a believer in the dream, too. He has been helping the Plsek's organize themselves in the city and is now hoping to find a market for Mr. Plsek's work.

He has tools and basic equipment, and a garage to use as a plant. Once the two find an outlet for the designs, they plan to begin producing them.

Mr. Plsek has photographs of toys, candle holders and handicraft items he designed in Czechoslovakia, many of which were put on display at the Czech pavilion at Expo 67. All of them he wants to make and sell.

Meanwhile, he and his wife are working and saving to settle themselves firmly in their new home.

Mr. Plsek even speculates there may not be a market for his art when talking about his plans. But immediately his eagerness and optimism take over and he says "there must be."

Time and Mr. Plsek's efforts will tell.

CHINESE REMEMBER COURAGEOUS CANADIAN DOCTOR

VICTORIAN'S CLOSE CALL

Norman Bethune Saves Another Life . . . 30 Years After His Death

By BOB MITCHELL

The 30-year-old legend of a Canadian doctor in China got Fred Barclay out of a tight spot 18 months ago when he was chief engineer on a British freighter.

Now working at Hyder, Alaska, Mr. Barclay, 53, told the story of his close call with Chinese authorities while on holiday at his home at 790 Hillside.

It all started Aug. 13, 1967, when he hired on as chief engineer with the British freighter Riley which was loading grain in Vancouver for a voyage to Communist China.

The trip across the Pacific was uneventful, except for one occasion when the chief engineer had to "pull a piston" when the Riley developed engine trouble.

The arrival at the port of Duran on mainland China marked the start of a six-week wait for docking facilities. Main cause of the hold-up was apparently a lack of boxcars, and the work of loading and unloading was considerably prolonged.

No sooner had the Riley anchored than Chinese customs officers arrived on board and proceeded to search every cabin on the ship. Mr. Barclay thought they were looking for anti-communist propaganda.

During the weeks while the ship awaited permission to dock, the crew was allowed to go ashore. The chief engineer said he was shocked by conditions in the town, which he described as slightly larger than Victoria.

He said every building was plastered with posters, and he assumed they were propaganda for the People's Republic proclaiming some latest development.

All the residents of the city had to work, he said, and on one occasion he helped an elderly couple of 70 push a loaded cart up a hill.

Meanwhile, the Riley's crew got a very bad reception in the town. Children and policemen taunted them and spat at them when they walked through the streets.

"We were white—that was all that mattered," Mr. Barclay commented.

It was during the long wait for docking facilities that the chief engineer had his run-in with the Chinese authorities. He was invited aboard a German freighter one night, and as a result of over-indulgence with "Demon Rum" was unable to return to his own ship.

He spent the night on the German ship, but when he attempted to return to the Riley in the morning, he was refused permission by the customs officials. He finally made it clear he was a Canadian and that he belonged on the British freighter.

He was taken back and ordered confined to his cabin. Later he was taken before a tribunal of Chinese officials in the master's cabin.

It was there he was informed he could have been shot for not returning to his ship the night before. The only reason he had been spared was the fact he was Canadian—and the fact that a Canadian, Dr. Norman Bethune, has become a legend in China since his death in 1939.

Bethune went to the front lines of the battle between Mao Tse-tung's North Chinese troops and the Japanese invaders, where he dispensed much-needed medical aid to wounded Chinese troops. He died months later of blood poisoning, and his grave in East Shansi has become a national shrine.

Mr. Barclay was not sure if the Chinese were bluffing when they told him his offence was punishable by death, "but I wasn't about to find out if they were," he said.

He was confined to the ship during the remainder of the Riley's stop at Duran. The crew was subjected to a certain amount of propagandizing by Chinese; when the ship docked an armed detachment came aboard, and a guard with a machine gun was placed at the gangplank.

Mr. Barclay now intends to write a book on his experiences in China, and hopes someday to return to study the country more closely.

The 1967 trip was not his first experience with the East. In 1933 he jumped his ship in Kobe, Japan, then proceeded to "hitch-hike" across two continents from Vladivostok to Le Havre.

"I was in China before the Revolution, and, granted, there was more famine than now, but I still don't think it's right.

"We complain a lot about the capitalist system, but I can now say that for all its disadvantages, capitalism is better than what they have over there."

Board, Town Look At Joint Ventures

CAMPBELL RIVER — Joint development between the school board and municipality could become a reality here if the two levels of local government can establish a workable formula.

Mayor Skip McDonald and school board chairman Bruce Saunders returned from a 1,500-mile trip to the lower mainland and interior communities where they observed areas that have already established such development.

Both men were enthusiastic about systems established in Kelowna, Penticton and Coquitlam.

"We liked what we saw," said Saunders, "but I think it can work even better in Campbell River."

He outlined five areas in which he felt mutual development could work.

- Developing school grounds into parks for community use;
- Joint development of an athletic complex;
- Joint construction of swimming pool facilities;
- Mutual use of a proposed convention hall;
- Co-operative construction of library facilities.

Mr. Saunders said that these proposals were a practical means of acquiring essential community facilities, and added that it may not save the taxpayer any more money but would provide far better facilities for the money spent.

The mayor said he will recommend to council that a special committee be struck to deal with joint development.

Barnett vs. Durante Plus a Tory

Top level speakers of Liberal and Conservative parties will vie for audiences in Comox-Alberni Friday as a federal by-election campaign gets started.

National Leader of the Conservatives, Robert Stanfield will address a nomination meeting at Campbell River. At the same time at Courtenay a cabinet minister is expected to speak to a Liberal nominating convention.

Either Justice Minister John Turner or Health Minister John Munro will attend, party sources said.

Liberals and NDP supporters say it is a foregone conclusion that Richard Durante and Tom Barnett, respectively, will be confirmed as their candidates.

First to be named as a potential Tory candidate is Campbell River school teacher Blair McLean. Les Hawker of Port Alberni is another possible nominee.

Messrs. Durante, Barnett and McLean ran in the federal election last June 25. Mr. Durante won by a small margin but the election was voided because several servicemen voted in Comox when their votes should have been cast in their home ridings.

The byelection has been set for April 8.

Mr. Barnett won the riding in 1953 and 1957, lost it in 1958, won it again in 1962, 1963, 1965 then was defeated by Mr. Durante in the voided election.

Misguided Well-Wishers Look in Wrong Direction

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial governments are evading their responsibilities to the Indian people, Canada's only Indian member of Parliament told the Vancouver Institute here today.

Leonard Marchand, Liberal MP for Kamloops, was particularly scathing of newspaper criticism of suggestions by Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien that provinces should provide more services for Indians.

Singling out the Edmonton Journal, Mr. Marchand said:

"Irresponsibility is not the exclusive field of politicians.

"Does the Edmonton Journal think that Indians are second-class citizens not deserving of the services for which they pay all the taxes except those on land?"

He said if the newspaper believed Alberta's services were too good for the Indians it should be "ashamed of itself."

"If they believe they are not good enough, then I would say there is something wrong with the province and the paper should be pointing this out, not throwing rocks at those who call for justice, fairness and equality."

Mr. Marchand said the provinces take the view that everything to do with Indians is a federal responsibility. "I take the view that Indians are Canadians and are entitled to consideration as Canadians. . . ."

"The only point at which Indians are properly concerned about federal government . . . ought to be that their land is a special federal trust and their treaties are a special federal commitment."

Mr. Marchand said he knew of "no other field where there are so many misconceptions, so many misguided well-wishers looking in the wrong direction, so many well-intentioned, dedicated people doing the wrong things and saying the wrong things."

He said he was hopeful that recent discussions on the Indian Act, between Indian chiefs and councillors of the bands and representatives of the government, would be fruitful.

"Some of the meetings were examples of the best kind of consultative democracy," he stated.

"For myself, I would welcome the abolition of the (Indian) act —phased over a few years so that adjustments could be made —and I would like to see Indian communities run their affairs in the same way that other communities run theirs."

Mr. Marchand said the people of Canada must open the doors of employment and of social acceptance to their Indian fellows. "We must all show that this is an open society with no artificial barriers," he stated.

The text of Mr. Marchand's speech was released to the press in advance.

NON-BUDGET REPORT PLANNED BY BENSON

Times Otawa Bureau

OTTAWA—Finance Minister E. J. Benson expects to present an "economic report" to Parliament in May or June.

It will be a follow-up to his budget brought down in October last year, he said here Friday.

The minister doubted that it would contain any tax changes. It would be more in the form of a report on the economy, consequently he suggested there was some question as to whether it could be properly described at a "budget."

Mr. Benson said the economy is "moving along pretty well" with revenues a little more buoyant than had been forecast in the Oct. 22 budget.

In that budget he forecast for the year 1969-70 total budgetary revenues of $11,675 million and budgetary expenditures at $11,670 million. He estimated on a national economic accounts basis the budget would involve a surplus of roughly $250 million.

English Rights Bill Threatened

QUEBEC (CP) — Cultural Affairs Minister Jean-Noel Tremblay said this week a government bill designed to protect English-language rights in the province apparently has failed to satisfy partisans of either side.

Mr. Tremblay, a member of the national assembly's education committee which is hearing briefs on the bill, remarked that it is clear the bill "satisfies neither English nor French-speaking people."

This was taken by some observers as an indication that the government may drop the bill.

The minister, considered a Quebec nationalist in the Union Nationale government, said he still foresees a place for French as the language of common usage in Quebec—but with respect for the province's second language.

The bill, besides guaranteeing the right of English-speaking Quebecers to obtain English school instruction for their children, would require high school graduates in the province to pass an examination in oral and written French before getting diplomas.

Earlier, Jean-Paul Lefebvre, Liberal member for Montreal-Ahuntsic, speaking during presentation of a brief by the Quebec City-area Association of English-Speaking Parents, said he believes the government will not present the bill during the next session of the assembly.

The association said the government must adopt measures to assure that both English and French be solidly rooted in the educational system.

SHOULD HAVE CHOICE

Parents should have the right to choose the language of instruction for their children, it said.

The Canada Committee called on Quebec to take the lead in promoting coast-to-coast bilingualism by reforming its school system

The Estates General of French Canada said "the only hope for a French life in America lies in 'Quebec francais,' powerful because of its number and influence."

—The 528-member Quebec Metropolitan English Catholic Parents' Association said bilingualism is a "national resource" which Quebec can exploit for its "political, economic and cultural well-being."

—Kanh-Tineta Horn of the Caughnawaga Indian reserve near Montreal said Quebec should respect Indian rights by permitting Indians to be instructed in their native tongues.

Farm Grant Plan Declared Arbitrary

OTTAWA (CP) — A stiff but unavailing fight against what the opposition describes as arbitrary features of a series of farm compensation and control bills continued Friday in the Commons.

Conservatives and New Democrats have assailed the powers the bills give government inspectors and the provisions for appeal.

Also criticized have been the provision for use of Exchequer Court justices as "assessors" in deciding compensation where the presence of chemicals or disease require the destruction of livestock or crops.

T. C. Douglas, back as NDP leader after a byelection victory in Nanaimo-Cowichan-The Islands, and Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West), a Conservative front-bencher, lashed out at what they called a trend towards government by bureaucratic decree.

GETS THIRD READING

They spoke on a three-clause bill to amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act. The bill, which received third reading under opposition protest, will allow the government to determine the amounts to be paid where farmers are forced to slaughter cattle because of diseases. Previously, the act provided for statutory maximums.

The bill also provides for an "assessor," a government-appointed judge, to hear appeals.

However, he would not be allowed to award more than the maximum compensation set by the government.

Agriculture Minister Olson said the maximums when the bills come into force Sept. 26 will be $200 for a pure-bred cow, up from $140 now, and $120 for a "grade" or mixed-breed animal, up from $70 now.

Debate began on third reading of a similar bill to regulate chemical products used by farmers to control pests "and the organic functions of plants and animals."

This bill provides for registration of products, their inspection and seizure if necessary, and appeals, again through an "assessor" judge.

CRITICIZES BILL

Ontario farmer Harold Danforth (PC—Essex-Kent) said the bill gives inspectors more powers than an RCMP officer enjoys.

"The fact that an inspector is government-employed and shows his identification gives him the right to go into any building or property and require every person to assist him in his inspection," Mr. Danforth said.

"It grants him the right to demand all books and papers he may deem necessary.

"He can require companies to cease the manufacture of a chemical. He can stop the transportation of it.

"He can stop the utilization of it.

"He can impound all quantities wherever they are found on his assertion that they do not meet the requirements of this bill with respect to labelling, storage, transportation or usage, or on the ground that the chemical may cause some danger either directly or residually to the food utilized for human consumption."

POWER ABSOLUTE

Protecting the consumer was laudable but the inspectors would have "absolute power" under legislation on which the regulations could be changed at any time.

Registration of farm-used chemicals often took weeks and months, sometimes because of disagreement between the food and health directorate and the agriculture department.

If arbitrary powers were going to be given, there should be equal powers of review. As it stood, the bill was "one-sided against industry."

Maurice Foster (L—Algoma) said he believes compensation paid for pure-bred animals should be higher.

This would not put a heavy strain on the federal treasury since only eight per cent of the 4,000 animals destroyed in 968 were pure-bred.

Group Planned To Protect English Rights

A Victoria branch of the Maritimes Loyalist Association will be set up in the next few months, says George Burnham, 620 Cook St.

The association was started in the eastern provinces last fall with the objective of "protecting all people who are residents of Canada from any discrimination based on creed, race or color."

It also demands that English should be the one official language of Canada, except for French people.

"The association insists that all except French people shall be relieved of any obligation to carry on business or conversation in French,' Mr. Burnham said.

Here is another Eddie Kantar hand. This one is taken from the pages of Popular Bridge and is extremely simple for one of Eddie's hands.

The bidding is his and since he was writing on play, he did not bother to explain the bids. We don't blame him.

The hand makes four no-trump but the play is automatic. The five-diamond contract presents quite a problem because there are only 10 easy tricks and there is no way to make the 11th by sheer powers.

The correct line of play, which also turns out to be a winner, is to ruff the first heart. Declarer wants to save his discard until later. His next play is a trump to dummy's king followed by a trump back to his own hand. Now he is ready to look for his 11th trick and the only place it can hide is in the club suit.

His first club play should be a low one to dummy's 10. He will be home free unless East is able to win with the jack. That is just what East does. If East returns a heart, South should ruff again, still keeping his discard in reserve. If East returns a spade, South should take his ace right away. If East returns a club, South should play low.

Let's assume a spade return. South takes his ace and leads his other low club to dummy's ace. He has hopes that the king will appear but it doesn't and he is down to the last shot in his locker.

He discards his queen of clubs on dummy's ace of hearts and ruffs a club. When both opponents follow, he enters dummy with the nine of diamonds and discards one spade loser on the 13th club.

LANSDOWNE BEAUTY NEAR GOLF COURSE

A beautiful home in lovely setting of a well-landscaped garden with heavy trees. The living room is SPACIOUS and has an attractive brick fireplace, the adjoining dining room accommodates a full-size dining room suite and opens to a small PATIO, ideal for enjoying your "typical cup of Oak Bay tea." The kitchen is a veritable delight with LOTS of cabinets and a large breakfast area. There are THREE large bedrooms on the main floor, while downstairs in the FULL SIZE HIGH basement is a HUGE RUMPUS ROOM with a fireplace and an extra bathroom. Plenty of room for additional development. In view of the fact that vacant lots would be worth $12,000 here, the asking price of $42,000 is quite in line. To view this exceptionally fine home call:

China Inland Missionary Dies at 83

Mrs. Georgena May Dickason, a Victoria music teacher and resident of Victoria and the Gulf Islands for 30 years, died early today in Royal Jubilee Hospital, aged 83.

At one time a worker for the China Inland Mission, she had conducted classes in this country for newly-arrived Chinese in citizenship and western religion concepts.

Mrs. Dickason had been organist and choirmaster for several United Churches throughout the country, including major churches in Toronto. She arranged and conducted seasonal cantatas and musical pageants.

An accomplished musician, she had music published over the years, mostly songs, which won limited but international appreciation. One of her books, a study of man and "the infinite," is in the U.S. Library of Congress.

Her late sister, Olive, was the original nurse with Sir Richard Grenfell in his medical-missionary accomplishments in Labrador, shortly after the turn of the century.

Mrs. Dickason had been a member of the B.C. Registered Music Teachers' Association, and was a member of the Silver Threads.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

She is survived by her husband, George, and one son, Anthony, both of Victoria.

Gold Rush Days Revived At Uvic Show

By ROBIN BURGESS
Uvic Correspondent

Dice rolled, cards shuffled, mini-skirted can-can girls clinked glasses and the tune was money for the University of Victoria's Ski Club Friday night.

It was Klondike Night at the Student Union Building and the thousands of students and adults loved it.

Tom McKeachie, co-ordinator, considered the event a financial success.

"The most popular entertainment was the saloon. Entertainers Valdi and Kip and Bob were very popular. Bob's piano-playing especially really set the mood."

Mr. McKeachie denied rumors of any large-scale disturbances.

"There were a few fights. I sure deeked a couple of guys.

NO POLICE RAID

"But there weren't any large-scale commotions and the police never came," he said.

Neil Aitken of Courtenay won the raffle—a two-week trip for two to Sunshine Village at Banff. High bidder in the auction for the car was Pete Songhurst, recently elected vice-president of the Student Union.

Three bars were open until midnight and Mr. McKeachie admitted keeping liquor away from minors was a full-time job.

"I took three dozen beer away from kids. We had to send a lot of them out."

However, the main problem turned out to be getting everyone to call it a night.

"It was 3 a.m. before we got the last out," said Mr. McKeachie.

Death Takes Octogenarian

Funeral services will be held on St. Stephen's Anglican Church Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. for Mrs. Florence Pearl Butler, a well known resident of Central Saanich.

Mrs. Butler, 82, died at her Keating Cross Road home Thursday.

A member of a Saanich pioneering family, she was the daughter of James Wilson Thomson and Annie Mary Thomson. He husband Claud Henry Butler predeceased her.

She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. C. W. Day (Dorothy); four sons, Claude Ormond, Charles Lawrence, Eric James and Thomas Henry; several grandchildren and great-grandchildren; a brother, Lorne Thomson, and sister, Mrs. Arthur Petch, both of Brentwood.

ARABS SLAM WEAPONS SALE

LONDON (AP)—Four Arab countries accused Britain Friday of slanting its Middle East policy in favor of Israel and protested reports of new British arms sales to the Jewish state.

Reports have persisted that The British are preparing to sell Israel new supplies of surplus Centurion tanks and other heavy weapons. Britain has denied this officially, but qualified informants said a new arms deal is under consideration.

Rough Ride Given Radio Hot Liner

By ROBIN BURGESS
Uvic Correspondent

"Bring out your leaders!" Ralph Pashley told students at the University of Victoria on Friday.

Mr. Pashley, radio hot-line commentator and a guest speaker at Dr. Efrat's Political Science 200 class, accused the university's "activist leaders" of taking less than the required five courses in order to draw out their university courses as long as possible.

He invited them to come forward to prove him wrong.

"I know that there are some of you who have been here so long it's not funny. You talk to any of the student leaders and you'll find they're only taking one or two courses," said Mr. Pashley.

DERISIVE SHOUTS

Students greeted Mr. Pashley's comments with shouts of derision. The question and answer period frequently came close to dissolving into a shouting match.

In reply to Mr. Pashley's accusation that student leaders take only one or two courses in order to prolong their university career, Paul Watson, a member of the Representative Assembly, said any student could only attend a maximum of six years before being asked to leave.

Assembly vice-president Rhys Phillips observed that "a sheep as he grows older doesn't grow wiser just more sheepish."

The greatest objection came from students when Mr. Pashley claimed to see no difference between a sit-in or peaceful protest and a violent disturbance such as on the campus at Sir George Williams last week.

"It's exactly the same thing. It disrupts . . . If you want to protest why don't you stay home from school?

"If you were my son you'd do what you were told," Mr. Pashley finally told one student.

Presidential Goal Nearer For Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Edward M. Kennedy celebrated his 37th birthday today, farther along the presidential path than either of his two slain brothers were at the same age.

After a family party Friday night in New York, aides said Kennedy planned to spend the day quietly at his McLean, Va., home.

When John F. Kennedy was 37, he had been in the Senate less than two years and was having severe problems with his back, injured in the Second World War. He was still two years away from emergence into national political prominence in his unsuccessful 1956 bid for the Democratic vice-presidential nomination.

Robert F. Kennedy, at 37, was attorney-general, the trusted confidante of his brother in a presidential administration that at the time seemed likely to extend another six years.

But Ted Kennedy, a senator from Massachusetts at 31, has been thrust into the leadership of his family by tragedy and into a leadership role in his party by its 1968 defeat and his own successful 11th-hour race for Senate Democratic whip.

As his party's No. 2 man in the Senate, Kennedy is expanding his efforts in a number of legislative fields. And public opinion polls show him the overwhelming favorite of Democrats to re-build their party after its defeat in last year's election.

Before Magistrate

A 20-year-old city youth was sentenced Friday to one year definite and one year indefinite in the Young Offenders Unit on three charges involving the sale of drugs.

David Laws, 516 Dallas, earlier pleaded guilty to selling STP, and to trafficking in marijuana and hashish.

The STP charge is the first of its kind to be laid in Victoria.

"This was not an isolated sale . . . you were apparently in business. I hope you turn your back on this illicit traffic. I can't think of any more wretched existence," said Magistrate William Ostler.

When he pleaded to the offences RCMP Const. John G. O'Neil said Laws sold Const. Mike Onischuk half a kilo of marijuana Oct. 26 and three pieces of hashish Oct. 5.

On Sept. 20 the accused and a girl met Const. Onischuk, who was working undercover at the time, and eight orange tablets of STP and $50 changed hands.

Magistrate Ostler said Laws had a pleasing personality and was highly spoken of by previous employers.

"You're not taking advantage of the potential you have," he said.

BUYS 'HOT GOODS'

A man who police said admitted to buying "hot" goods pleaded guilty to possession of more than $400 worth of stolen property.

Douglas Bryan Stoddart, of 475 West Obed, was remanded to Feb. 28 for sentence.

Det. Angus Stewart said a search of the accused's home Thursday turned up a number of radio and tape decks, speakers, and a "home entertainment centre", totalling $417.95.

Some of the goods were taken from Stereo World, 1321 Quadra, and the rest from Kings Auto Radio, 1816 Quadra, in break-ins Dec. 23 and Feb. 4.

Det. Stewart said Stoddart told police he bought the goods outside a Colwood pub for about $80 about a month-and-a-half ago.

"In general circumstances a person should go to jail for assaulting a police officer. They have to be protected and that's what the courts are here for."

PLEADS GUILTY

Magistrate Ostler made the remarks after Clifford Sam, 35, of the East Saanich reserve, pleaded guilty to assaulting a Colwood RCMP officer.

He was fined $400.

"I am sure he (the accused) was very intoxicated," the magistrate said after hearing the evidence.

Court was told Sam was found on a veranda of a house on Admirals Road Thursday night and it took Const. A. J. Lachapelle five to 10 minutes to waken him.

Sam then "went at" the officer three different times and struck his a number of times on the arms and then kicked him. The officer was unhurt.

When calmed down he apologized but gave no reason for the assault.

REDUCE CHARGE

A chrage of rape against William C. Murphy, CFB Esquimalt, was withdrawn and a preliminary hearing will be held March 12 on a lesser charge of indecent assault.

Murphy, represented by Alan Bigelow, elected trial by judge and jury.

Gloria Carvath, 834 Esquimalt, was given a suspended sentence and put on a $250 one-year good behavior bond for shoplifting.

She pleaded guilty a week ago to taking a $28 dress from Taylor's Apparel, 713 Yates, on Jan. 10.

Pleading guilty to impaired driving Kenneth Smith, 1680 Midgard, was fined Thursday $350 or 35 days. Magistrate J. A. Byers also recommended that his licence be suspended for four months.

Smith was apprehended at his home after police found an abandoned car against a tree on private property in the 1700 Midgard block.

Alexander Lushawa of 1266 Johnson, was fined $300 for impaired driving.

City Doubles Garbage Wharf Fee

The cost of dumping garbage at the Victoria city wharf will be doubled Monday.

New rate will be a flat 50 cents per cubic yard. It has been 25 cents for the first cubic yard, 20 cents for each additional cubic yard.

Reason for the increase, said a spokesman, is the extra cost of new health board regulations which ban burning and order compacting and burial of garbage at Hartland Road, to which city wharf garbage is taken.

Since the two garbage dumps on Millstream Road closed last week, after failing to comply with new health board regulations, business has boomed at the wharf.

The average of 40 to 50 trailers a week jumped to 61 this week and more are expected next week.

Gun Fight Kills Two

TACOMA (AP) — A holdup man and his intended victim both died in a gun duel at a grocery store near here Friday. The victim, 44-year-old Robert L. Herbert, owner of the store, died of a .22 shot in the heart after his store was robbed. But Herbert fired two shots from a .45 automatic through the heart of the bandit.

Meal Service Still Needs Help

Volunteers are still wanted to help deliver Meals-on-Wheels.

The service provides one hot meal at 50 cents each for those who cannot prepare or shop a meal for themselves.

It is jointly operated by Silver Threads, Community Welfare Services, Metropolitan Health Department, Victorian Order of Nurses, Greater Victoria Council of Churches, and the city council.

Circus Draws Large Crowd

The Victoria High School Circus is the kind of event that incorporates under one roof most of the entertainment forms.

It's one of the few places where patrons can check their babies as well as their coats.

When the circus opened Friday night the public was invited to enjoy a variety show, coffee house, discotheque, Bavarian pub and movies. Games and refreshments, just what you'd expect to find at a circus, were also provided in abundance.

The variety show, offering belly dancers, comedy sketches and singers, was popular, and made three runs during the evening.

Principal Duncan Lorimer called the evening a "great success".

Funds raised from the event, which is held every two years, go toward the co-curriculum program, which includes such extracurricular activities as athletics and music.

"The circus pays for things like the cost of sending a basketball team to Vancouver," Mr. Lorimer said.

He did not know how much money had been raised, but said attendance at the circus was in the "thousands."

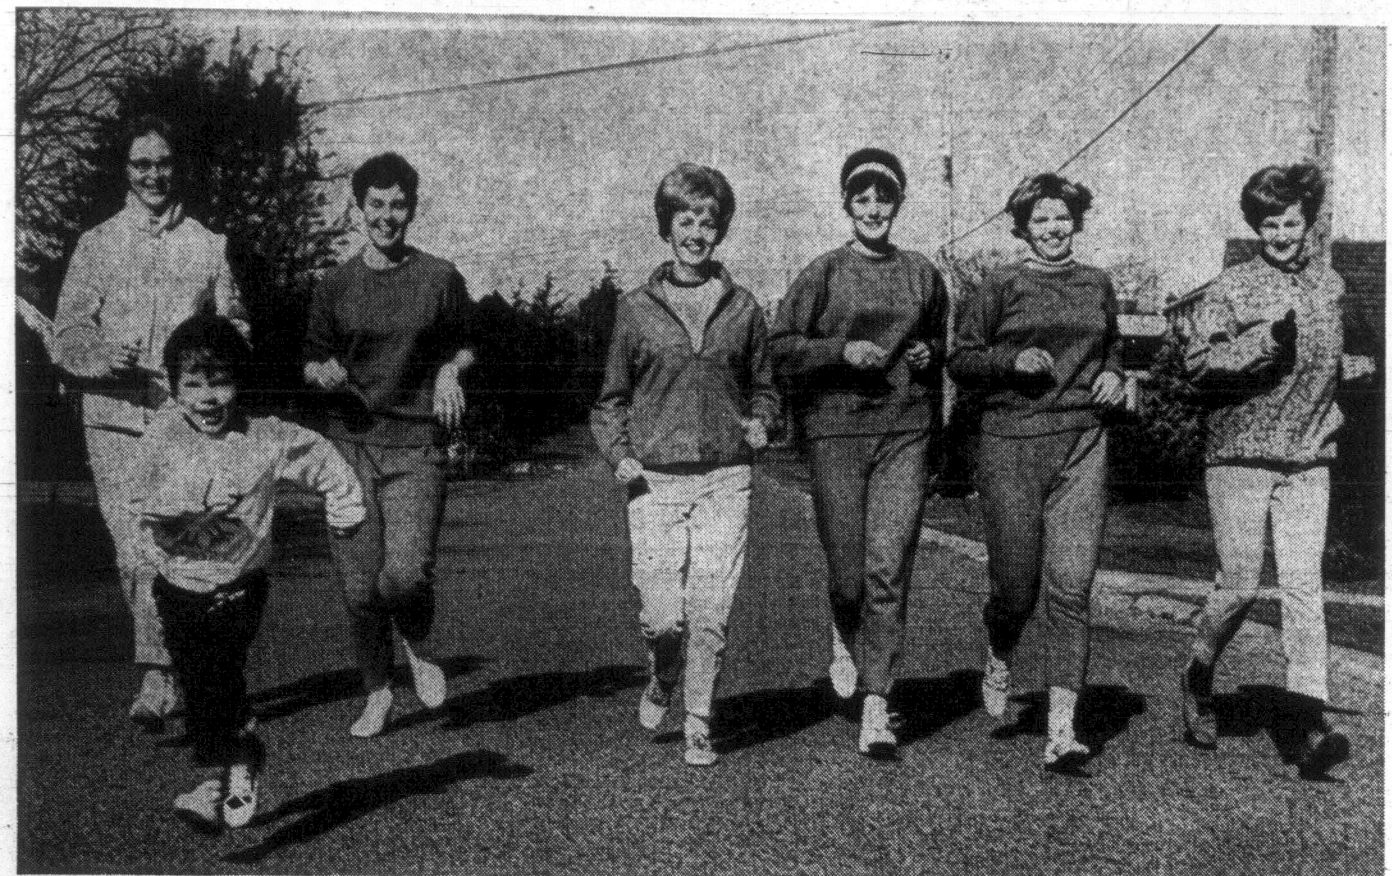
Victoria Daily Times
VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, FEB. 22, 1969 —PAGE 35



Four-year-old Ronald Jacklin shows off his jogging style, and with a bit of a head start, out-distances the rest of the "kids". Ron is a regular member of this small Oak Bay jogging group which includes, reading from the left, Mrs. Leonard Bieller, Mrs. A. M. Jacklin (Ron's mother), Mrs. E. J. Potvin, Mrs. Ron Thornthwaite, Mrs. W. M. Cambridge and Mrs. Howard E. Carpenter. All agree that jogging is fun.

Disowned by Children, Mothers Jog On Anyway

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

They call themselves the "Nutty Club."

Their children, with one exception, disown them.

The neighbors? "Well, everyone smiles as we go by."

"They" are six Oak Bay housewives who jog. They began five weeks ago, despite the snow, running (or sometimes walking) a mile a day, every day, starting at 10:30 sharp.

"Sometimes we run along Willows Beach or around the park. There really is only one place that is 'off limits': Our kids won't let us go near the school," said Mrs. W. M. Cambridge.

It was Mrs. Cambridge who started it all, with a bit of prompting from Dr. J. J. Haegert.

REFUSED COFFEE

"He suggested it and I mentioned it next day at coffee. It wasn't hard to convince everyone: I just refused to serve them coffee."

Now that they are in the habit of jogging, none of the six would stop.

"I feel better," said one. "More energy," added another "It's an excuse to get out the door and into the fresh air," chimed in a third.

"We used to waste an hour every day having coffee anyway, so we figured why not jog for half an hour and have coffee for half an hour instead," said Mrs. A. M. Jacklin.

"We aren't trying to reduce or anything — it's just fun," summed up Mrs. H. E. Carpenter.

But some of the people along their route are hard to convince. At times they stop in to do their banking or buy groceries (and rest) at a nearby shopping centre during their jog.

Mrs. Cambridge reports that one morning a shopkeeper refused to sell her a chocolate bar. "He threatened to tell the others I was cheating."

Mrs. Jacklin is the only one with a pre-school-aged child, but four-year-old Ronald is no problem. He jogs along with the rest.

In fact, he gives them an excuse to rest. "Ron runs really fast, then has to stop," explained his mother. "By then we are all ready to walk anyway."

To Ron, the jogging mothers have ceased to be adults. He refers to them as "the kids."

"I'll be tying up my shoes in the morning and Ron will come running in and call 'Hurry up. The kids are waiting!'" said Mrs. Jacklin.

Jogging during the snow "was the only thing that got us outdoors," they report. To keep dry they ran in the car tracks, dragging Ron on a sled.

"That gave us lots of arm exercise," said Mrs. Cambridge. "But Ron's selfish—he wouldn't share!"

Toronto YWCA Provides Home for Indian Girls With Counselling and Orientation Program

TORONTO (CP) — At a big comfortable house in the central area of Toronto, a co-operative home for Indian girls has been established to help them adapt to the city way of life and find employment.

The home, operated by the Young Women's Christian Association, was the idea of the local Council of Women and the Indian-Eskimo Association in Toronto. It can house 15 girls at a time.

Members of the council and association were concerned because Indian girls were coming to the city without money or job training and were quickly becoming lonely and unhappy. In some cases they were arrested for vagrancy.

Life for Indian girls like 19-year-old Linda Corbiere of Manitoulin Island has changed since she left home.

Linda, who would like to be a nursing assistant, has an attractively decorated bedroom, white-painted chests, bright bedspreads and drapes.

During the first two weeks she stayed at the home, she took part in an orientation program. She was shown around the city, acquainted with facilities and taught how to get from one place to another.

She met counsellors who assessed her interests and capabilities and was taken to a hospital to see the type of employment she likes.

After the first two weeks, the girls are ready to start school.

Many of them have dropped out of school at Grade 7 and will have to upgrade their academic work before they begin vocational training.

The Toronto board of education and Canada Manpower centres are assisting the girls in counselling, as are Indian people who have already adjusted to the city life.

The house mother is Josephine Beaucage, a motherly Indian woman who worked at the Elliot Lake centre for continuing education before coming to Toronto. House director is Glenna Graham, a young social worker.

Denise Akiwenzie, a Centennial College graduate who came from the Cape Croker reserve, is Mrs. Beaucage's assistant.

At the moment, three months has been set as the maximum time each girl may stay at the home, After that, counsellors help them find other accommodation.

The federal department of Indian affairs gives each girl $10 a week pocket money and for most ot them it's all the money they'll have until they start working. The department also pays their room and board and education expenses.

Many of the girls become "big sisters" after they leave the home and work to help new girls who have come to see the lights of the city.

Repressive Convents Described in Book

OTTAWA (CP) — Claire Martin, who has gained a reputation among French readers for her five books, is a cheerful, witty woman.

Winner of a Governor-General's Award for her autobiography In An Iron Glove, Miss Martin in private life Mrs. Roland Faucher of Ottawa said in an interview that the book has engendered some "nasty letters."

But it had also brought letters of praise from people in and out of the Roman Catholic Church.

"I have had grateful letters from priests and nuns," she said.

The autobiography, now available in English, tells of her tyrannical father and her education in bleak and repressive convents. But it is all told with an objective eye and a heart that is not bitter.

"My parents are dead," Miss Martin said. "An elderly aunt was slightly upset by Iron Glove but my sisters and brother liked it. There is something ridiculous about tyrants."

Claire Martin was the middle child of seven in a well-to-do family. Her mother, who died when Miss Martin was 12, was often ill so Miss Martin spent much time with her grandparents.

She speaks of them with warm affection. "My grandfather was the kind of man who put a little present by my plate every morning."

Miss Martin started to "scribble bits and pieces" in her convent schools "but they were the sort of mercurial things the nuns destroyed."

Despite her father's disapproval of women working, Miss Martin went to work for the CBC as a radio announcer, first in Quebec City and then in Montreal.

In 1945 she married chemist Roland Faucher and they moved to Ottawa.

Miss Martin's first book of short stories published in 1958 gave her courage to continue writing.

She tries to write four or five hours every afternoon and says it takes her 18 months to write a book.

Ao Dais Out For Girls In Saigon

SAIGON (Reuters) — The ao dai, traditional long-flowing Vietnamese costume worn by women over ankle-length silk pants, is on the way out for many teen-age girls in Saigon.

The girls are switching to Western-style mini-skirts, many of them in garish psychedelic colors, and all the other trappings of youngsters in big Western cities.

With their natural grace, long hair and dark beauty, Vietnamese girls are well suited to the brightly-colored creations which have become the rage here.

With giant, round sunglasses, patent-leather snub-nosed shoes and enormous bows in their hair, the Saigon girls look every bit the part of their Western sisters.

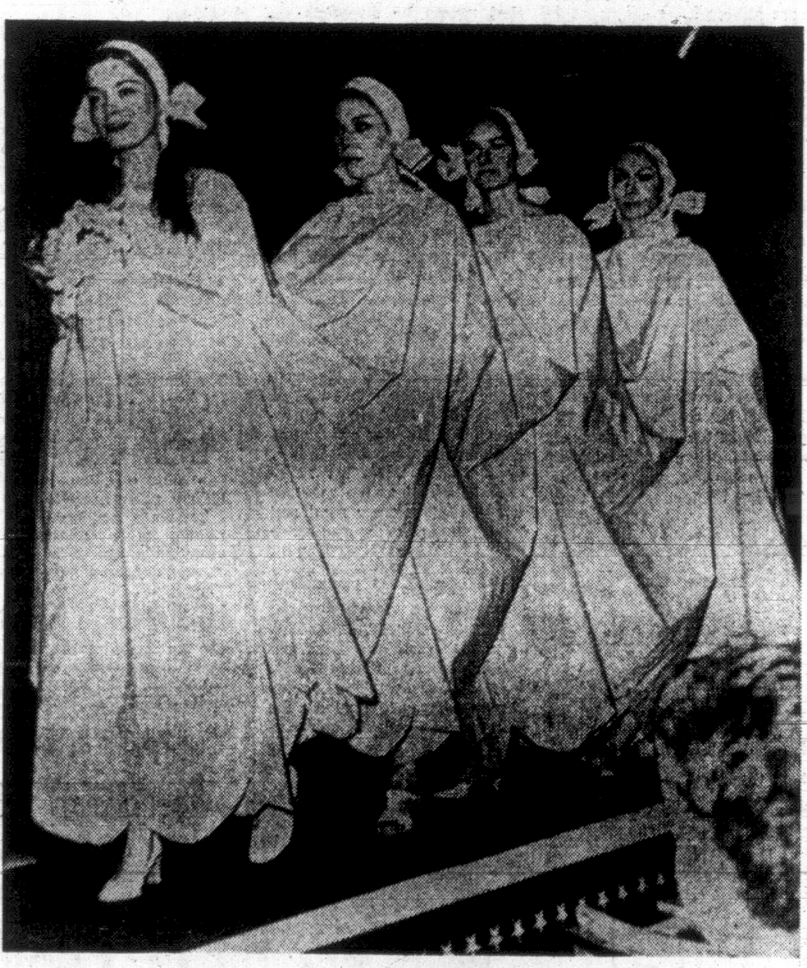
But there the comparison with Western life ends.

A rash of boutiques has sprung up throughout the city. Bright shop windows display puce handbags with gold straps, or hippie-style medallions on long chains.

But all this is expensive. The average price of a mini-skirt—advertised as the latest style from London or Paris—is 3,200 piastres, about $27.60, made to measure, compared with 2,400 piastres, about $20.64, for an ao dai.

Mini-dresses, also popular, come even more expensive. Many dressmakers and small stores are turning out mini-shirts at hurricane speed to meet the demand. One couturier estimated the swing among teen-agers from ao dais to minis to be about 60 per cent in the last three months.

Many of the bright young girls flash through the streets sidesaddle on the back of scooters or motorbikes, receiving loud wolf whistles as they pass truck loads of troops bogged down in the city's heavy traffic.



THE BRIDE WORE PAPER

It looks like a second-rate Chinese dragon in a parade, but it is a designers' idea of a practical wedding dress, for bride and attendants included. The multi-person outfit, presented at a show of disposable fashions in New York this week, consists of a huge scalloped sheet of yellow paper with four head holes and eight arm slits. It is supposed to eliminate the problem of what to do with an expensive bridesmaid's dress hanging in the cupboard unused. But what happens if there is one short bridesmaid between two six-footers? Canada's Founders Had Fun

"Confederation in Canada was a movement, a gradual crystallization of ideas, the result of many political and economic deliberations over a period of about 10 years. But it also provided a background for lots and lots of fun!"

Dr. John Careless went on to describe the fun, celebrations and political excitement that accompanied confederation when he spoke to the Victoria University Women's Club recently, at the War Amputations Hall.

Former head of the history department at the University of Toronto and currently a visiting professor of history at the University of Victoria, Dr. Careless is the author of several books, two of which have won the Governor-General's medal.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. J. E. Browne and thanked by Mrs. K. T. Seaborne.

The president, Mrs. J. McCallum introduced two new members, Mrs. H. R. Larsen and Mrs. L. G. Toms.

The club has planned a scholarship tea to be held Saturday, March 29 at the Student Union Building, University of Victoria, for women graduates and their friends.

Bride Performs Her Swan Song

BRAINTREE, England (AP) — It was a wedding breakfast with a difference as the 50 guests crowded into the night spot. For the exotic belly dancer was the bride, 21-year-old Venetia Matania. She had been married earlier in the traditional white. Looking on as she danced for the last time were her new 24-year-old husband, Colin Rickson, an accountant; his parents, her mother and other relatives.

If You're a HEP Girl— Where's Your Wig?

Do you wear a bra? Or foundation? Use cosmetics? Do you believe in labor saving? Washer, vacuum, disposer, electricity? Then where's your wig?

Use instant coffee? Frozen foods? A frostless refrigerator? Wigs save time, too—lots of time.

Think of it! A perfect coif in a minute. From wig stand to your head! Ready to go. Flawless! faultlessly coiffed!

If you're modern, be modern. If your time is worth saving in many other ways, it's worth saving in your boudoir and bathroom.

We believe in wigs because we hear what owners say. Votes for women were nothing compared with wigs. Kleenex was a faltering step compared with wigs. Deodorants? Dandy. But wigs are more handy.

Wigs aren't to fool people. They're to "cool" people—their owners. Wigs make it possible to be calm in the hectic rush from being one person at 10, and another at 12, or leading one life at 5 and another at 7. Save time on your hair and you'll have time for your face.

Come in and get the lowdown on a high-style wig that you'll love us for showing you. No obligation. Come, explore.

Incidentally, we are now giving a discount on all Wigs and Falls. Phone or drop in and have a chat with Carole, our Wig Specialist.

Terms can be arranged to suit your budget.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Unique hangings for your walls . . .

The Handloom is mighty proud of its latest acquisition . . . a handwoven tapestry wall hanging by the Wagners . . . that fantastically talented husband and wife team . . . (she does the spinning and dyeing of fleeces, and he does the weaving) . . . This one is quite unique . . . a real masterpiece in fact . . . A 43x56-inch abstract of ferns and weeds . . . in earthy greens, oranges, browns and blues . . . Price is $500 . . . A magnificent focal point for a modern room! . . . Another wall hanging . . . this one batik . . . called "Eastern Flowers", is done in the manner of old Taiwan art by Eileen Alfoldy . . . In the pottery line, Handloom has a new Kakinuma . . . a quintet of owls . . . which is charming . . . Four of the birds face forward, while a fifth curious little fellow is turned half around, for a touch of whimsy . . . More whimsy in Kakinuma's big red carp with his mouth forming a big O . . . and a smaller one with a femininely flirtatious expression! . . . There's a gorgeous table lamp by Tina Lyon . . . grey pottery with a "crater" glaze (like the moon's surface) . . . Cutouts on the base, and a tall, hand-made shade . . . And from the same artist, a brown ceramic hanging lamp with cut-out shapes to let the light through . . . a conversation piece for hall or patio . . . The Handloom, 18 Centennial Square, 384-1011.

European women are in a tizzy over KH3—the "revitalizing" drug reputed to restore youth to aging bodies.

Terrific toppers . . .

Impacts 'n' Imports is one store we always have an irresistible urge to enter whenever we're in the vicinity of Centennial Square . . . because we just know we're going to see something distinctly different and satisfying to our fashion sense . . . and we've yet to be disappointed! . . . This week it's the printed cotton or fine wool knit blouses from Austria . . . Maybe "blouse" isn't quite the right name . . . they could also be called jackets or sweaters or tunics . . . but however you designate them, they're certainly terrific toppers for slacks, skirts, or to spark-up a plain dress . . . The prints run mainly to paisleys . . . but paisleys with a difference, and there are other designs too . . . and the way border patterns are incorporated into the styling strikes us as particularly attractive . . . not to mention slimming, if we happen to need such! . . . Cotton knits are tagged at $27.50, while the wools are $30 and $32.50 . . . and they come in several different styles . . . one a long cossack blouse, with belt . . . another a cardigan, and a third a border pattern with pewter buttons and antique buckle on the wide belt . . . Colors are out of this world . . . and by a happy coincidence, are keyed to team up with and complement Impacts 'n' Imports' Bleyle polyester slacks and skirts, which also come in marvellous colors . . . Impacts 'n' Imports, 8 Centennial Square, 388-7023.

The new Dior look is a triumph of the classic over fantasy.

An ideal gift for a new baby . . .

Tired of giving the usual sweaters and such-like to brand new babies? Then go see the treasure we found this week at the Book Nook . . . A new Mother Goose book with all the old familiar rhymes . . . plus beautiful new illustrations by Japanese artist Gyo Fujikawa . . . It's sheer delight . . . and to make it even better, you can get a package of four plastic-coated pictures from the book suitable for framing . . . and marvellous for any child's room . . . These cost only $1.95, and the book is $4.95 . . . the sort of gifts which will give pleasure all through the childhood years . . . We're completely fascinated, too, by the Book Nook's just received origami books . . . which, if you don't know, is the ancient art of Japanese paper folding, now enjoying a terrific vogue . . . There's "Fold and Paste," the origami storybook for small children . . . Other original books adapted to different age groups, from kindergarten to adulthood . . . books telling you how to make flowers, birds, animals and fishes . . . plus more complicated designs for all sort of things including charming mobiles . . . Some of the books contain special colored folding paper . . . and you can buy a whole package of this special paper in rainbow colors for $1.50 . . . Origami's a great new hobby for all the family . . . go find out about it at . . . The Book Nook, 10 Centennial Square, 386-0813.

False hairpieces for little girls . . . pigtails and falls . . . are being sold in a Los Angeles salon.

Beautiful new coats at Wilson's . . .

When they're surrounded by beautiful clothes all day, it takes something rather special to get salesladies excited . . . but we assure you that at Wilson's this week they're all agog over the beautiful, beautiful spring coats which have just arrived from England . . . and quite frankly, so are we! . . . Our very favorite is a "skinny" coat of pure wool worsted in grey and white Prince of Wales check . . . Sensational styling, with floating back panel and half belt . . . snowy white crimplene collar and cuffs which whisk off in a jiffy, thanks to that ingenious self-adhesive Velcro . . . Size 12 . . . and there's also a navy and white in a 10 . . . There's a windowpane check in navy and lupin blue on off-white ground, size 8, which would be lovely for travelling . . . A yummy tobacco and white checkerboard-design coat with leather buttons and wide leather belt riding high under the bust . . . very newest belt placement, we understand . . . Other interesting style details like buttons inside the inverted back pleat . . . Looks terrific on! . . . For the petite, dainty woman there's a sweetheart of a coat in pale blue ottoman . . . styled much like coats favored by the ladies of the royal family . . . 8 petite . . . There's also a white in size 10, and cafe-au-lait shade in 12 . . . More lovelies, too, which space doesn't permit us to describe today . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government Street, 383-7177.

Spain now has some 10 top dress designers—leading exponents of a new industry reigned over by Pertegaz.

Shoes for the woman with conservative tastes . . .

Caressa . . . a prety name for pretty shoes . . . and moreover, a very descriptive one because these fine U.S.-made shoes . . . exclusive to Munday's here in Victoria . . . do indeed have a nice way of caressing one's feet . . . We saw the new models for spring in Munday's this week with their sleek, feminine styling which . . . while very much 1969 . . . has none of that heavy, clunky look some of us find unflattering . . . Heels are a trifle higher . . . in fact on two of the models they're what used to be called "illusion" height . . . and toes are rounded without being broad . . . "Albany," in beige or black calf, is a good suit shoe . . . Sports a shaped leather buckle with a small gold buckle set in . . . "Nelvin" is a dressier shoe with higher heel, short vamp and grosgrain ribbon trim . . . Very smart in the new light grey shade . . . also beige calf and black patent . . . A third pattern is called "Genoa," and it, too, would underline a suit to perfection . . . Chic and tailored, it's trimmed with a big pearl button, and bone calf with tortoiseshell button . . . All three of these new Caressas are priced at $28.95 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas Street, 383-2211.

Hardy Amies' hemlines are one inch above the knee. This season he went overboard for check patterns and navy coloring.

Fully lined, sleeveless, there's a double frill down the front and round the neckline . . . Predominating gold or green backgrounds . . . We guarantee you've never seen anything like the navy slub linen . . . the points of whose white collar extend right down to mid-thigh! . . . it's the collar to end all collars . . . and should make the lucky young wearer the cynosure of all eyes! . . . Same observations goes for what we've dubbed the "batman" dress . . . a real fun dress in red, white and navy silk with simply enormous sleeves . . . each one of which contains as much material as the whole body of the dress! . . . Spring Thoughts Lead to Gardens

By PENNY SAVER

It is almost that time again: The time when spades replace snow shovels and the annual planting begins. Of course, here in Victoria we have already discarded the snow shovels—if we had them in the first place (I suspect many a homeowner used a spade to clear his snow) but the analogy remains. It is almost spring. Now I am not the yard-proud type. My bulbs usually remain in the ground all winter, to rot or not to rot as the mood and the weather conditions take them. But I do stir myself to do a bit in the early part of the season: Removing the most unsightly weeds or lopping a branch or two (yes, I know this is the wrong season) if it seems utterly dead. My neighbors give me cross looks at times, but then they are perfectly free to come and garden for me if they so desire.

It is around this time of the year that new garden-minded residents begin to wonder about growing conditions in their chosen home. After all Victoria may be a city of gardens, but every garden is different and none takes care of itself. For these people there is a beautiful new book called "Gardening in the West" by Robert A. Nicholson. This $2.25 paperback book is full of photos and diagrams to show the neophyte the proper way to, say, trim a deciduous tree or shorten the stem of a potted plant that has taken on a palm-like shape. There are a multitude of sections covering such topics as the importance of suitable soil, vegetables, weeds and pests, planning a patio or rock garden, or sewing seeds indoors. An index makes it easy to refer to any specific section. One section I was glad to note in the table of contents dealt with historical plant name and legendary associations, a topic that I feel is too often neglected. Packed with information, this book should make interesting reading for the garden-minded, seasoned westerners and newcomers alike.

Bilingual Winner

Before I leave the topic of books, I would like to mention two that I saw for children. One is a French Canadian book written for children between the ages of five and nine. The text is in both languages and would be ideal for the child whose parents are teaching him a second language as early as possible. The title is "Evergreen Island: How Growley-Wowley Made Friends." This book took first prize in its class from the Centennial Commission and from the bits I saw must be quite exciting. The pictures, pencil drawings in a style that reminds me very much of Shepperd's illustrations for "Winnie the Pooh," showed a child, a bear (Growley-Wowley perhaps?) and a nice-looking sea-serpent again and again. This durable hard-cover book costs $3.50.

My other "find" is a new Brian Wildesmith book. Many parents are familiar with this talented illustrator's nature books and "ABC." This new volume is for children eight to 12 years of age and deals with stories from the Bible. Chosen from both the New and Old Testaments, these stories have been rewritten for children by Phillip Turner, vicar of St. Matthews, Northampton, Eng. The illustrations are in the true Wildesmith tradition, soft, yet colorful. This $6.50 book is sure to raise a child's interest in the drama and beauty contained within the pages of the Bible.

Lowly Sneakers Make the Fashion Scene With Nehru Collars and Brass Buttons

By FLORENCE DE SANTIS

In this spring season of fashion shoes, none has been more obviously changed than the once-lowly sneaker. It no longer is just that functional rubber-soled canvas tie-on that does very well for tennis or boating but gets left behind otherwise.

Now it's being styled as a fun leisure shoe that can accent any sportswear, and Randy of Boston has a whole new group of fashion sneakers for spring into summer fun hours.

First there are new shapes. One is a mini-boot, rising just to anklebone height. Another is a calf-high boot styled to look like oldtime gaiters.

Second there are the colors, patterns and details. They're all done with an eye to current fashion trends.

Start with a spring jumper look in mock antiqued leather, worn with a striped cotton knit shirt. As the costume will often be in the new spring brown, and buckle-trimmed, there's a Randy sneaker in butterscotch with tan straps, buckled to accent the outfit.

Spring wardrobes will surely proceed to red, white and blue fashions. For a skirt with striped shirt in these colors, have a mini-boot sneaker also striped in red and white. Of course, they come in several other colors, too.

A special sneaker style is the "Boatshu" with its grip-the-deck thicker soles. This is done in classic boating white for wear with blazers and pants, whether you're really on deck or just pretending. On the other hand, if the pants costume has a Nehru jacket, there's a Nehru-collared sneaker with brass buttons like those of the jacket.

Most striking of all the new fashion sneakers is what Randy calls the "nude" look. This is an ankle-high sheath of clear vinyl mounted on a rubber sole, and with canvas strapping. At a little distance it looks like a glamorous sandal, yet it's really a boot. It's for beach wear, now at resorts and later at home beaches.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Anesthetic Won't Give Her Away

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please don't think I am being childish, but I am worried about something I can't confide in anyone else. I am scheduled to have some extensive dental surgery in the near future and my dentist has informed me that I will have to be "put under" with a regular anesthetic.

That doesn't bother me, but I understand people tell a lot of tales out of school while they are "under" and I don't want to take any chances because our dentist belongs to our club and it could be embarrassing, if you know what I mean.

I would appreciate any help you can give me.

WORRIED.

DEAR WORRIED: Don't worry, it will be practically impossible for you to put your foot in your mouth while your dentist has his hand in it. Besides, only a psychiatrist gets paid for listening.

DEAR ABBY: I am a housewife with all kinds of problems. One of the biggest is my husband, Sam. He brings the boys in for poker two nights a week. If that was all, I wouldn't complain. The boys never have the poker game at their house. Never. They come here like wolves with empty stomachs, and pretty soon Sam comes and asks ME to fix the boys a snack, so I fix up a big plate of sandwiches. Next it's beer. Abby, twice a week gets pretty expensive with the allowance I get.

I have mentioned this to Sam, but he refuses to say a word to the boys about it. So what should I do?

SAM'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Inform Sam that unless he sweetens the pot, or asks his poker pals to ante up—no refreshments! And tell him you're a pretty good poker player, too, so he'd better not call your bluff.

DEAR ABBY: This problem has caused my brother, sisters and myself extreme embarrassment and shame. Our parents have been divorced for several years. Dad remarried, but his wife left him shortly afterwards, so now he goes to visit Mom quite often.

We children are all married and could provide a room for Dad when he comes to town, but he prefers staying with Mom at her one-bedroom apartment. I'm sure he's not sleeping on the couch. How can we convince them that if they're going to live together again they should get married? People are beginning to talk.

EMBARRASSED

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Your parents' behavior reflects only on themselves. Let them know you disapprove of their unconventional behavior and forget it. They'll do what they want to do anyway.

DEAR ABBY: Following the birth of my fifth child, my doctor felt that more children might result in serious damage to my health, so with my consent he "tied my tubes."

After that, my husband promptly turned a cold back on me. Being an old farm boy he said, "Once an animal has been 'fixed,' it's no good." A few years later he walked out on me.

The children and I have made an almost full life for ourselves, but I never have been able to grow fond of another man. Then in your column I read a letter that eased the deep, old pain.

Please thank that wonderful MD who wrote to say that his wife's birth-scarred body is the most beautiful in the world.

GRATEFUL IN OREGON

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NOT SURE": As I see it, your biggest problem is not getting stuck with the ring. Don't become officially engaged to a girl to "get her off your back" while you're "thinking it over." More men have been stuck with girls than with rings.

Official Visit — Grand factor, Mrs. A. Galloway, and grand secretary, Mrs. F. Foster of Ladysmith, paid their official visit to the Victoria Post, Native Daughters of B.C., recently. Prior to meeting at The Inn on Cook Street the members entertained the visiting officers at a dinner at Holyrood House. Chief factor, Mrs. M. Skogstad, presided at the meeting where reports were read and plans made for a rummage sale to be held March 29 at The Inn. Mrs. Galloway spoke on the history of Ladysmith. The visiting officers were presented with gifts. Following the meeting the post celebrated its 48th birthday. Miss Lillian Smethurst, charter member, provided a cake decorated in the post colors of yellow and white which was cut by the chief factor. A social hour followed.

A Mouse Called Peace Goes in for Cat-Biting

Peace, the mouse who emigrated from California last year, is blissfully happy when Michelle Navran pats his head and strokes his back. The Fearless Fosdick of mousedom has a neurotic friend called Trembles who also lives at the Navran house, but is anti-social. (Bill Halkett Photo)

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

Forget the old thing about man bites dog.

I've got real news: I've just met the mouse that bit the cat.

His name, oddly enough, is Peace.

Peace emigrated to Canada with his people when they moved here from California last year. It would be an exaggeration to say that he is officially a landed immigrant, but he was certainly the subject of an exhaustive search through regulations at the Canadian consulate in Los Angeles.

Dr. Leslie Navran had a bit of trouble with his family when they decided to move to Victoria; his wife refused to come without Peace.

Ridiculous, of course, except to fellow members of SOS, the Sisterhood of Softies, who are absurdly soppy about animals. Marca Navran is founder, and says membership is open to any sucker who finds herself a slave to an animal.

PASSPORT FOR PEACE?

Anyway, the Navran's thought that Peace would have to get clearance of some sort to come to Canada. Other animals need shots or have to be quarantined, but Canadian officials at the consulate could find no rules about mice.

As Marca tells it:

"We could hardly believe it. So we just put Peace in his cage in the back of the car and worried a lot."

"When we got to the border Les just disappeared, pretending he had nothing to do with Peace or me.

"The customs officer looked through the car and saw the cage, and we all nearly died until he said 'Splendid mouse you have there' and waved us on through.

"I just love your Canadian customs people!"

Peace has adjusted well to his new home.

He is so fearless that the Navrans daren't let him out of his cage except under closest supervision.

NOSE TO NOSE

It was during one of these playtime episodes that Peace bit Cat.

Marca again:

"We were worried that Cat would gobble Peace in one mouthful, so we were watching very carefully, especially when they nuzzled each other nose to nose.

'Then Peace took a playful bite. He didn't draw blood, but he sent Cat packing in a hurry."

Peace's friend, Trembles, is however, a mouse of lesser mettle.

This is natural, since he entered the Navran household in Cat's mouth.

He was rescued, fed, loved and observed, but his mental health was not good.

EARLY TRAUMA

Trembles was not domesticated. He had not been reared on tender loving care like Peace. He was, to understate the case, suspicious of his benefactors.

But Marca, who talks to animals, soothed him and fed him and did all she could to help him gain confidence.

Trembles remained confused.

After a while, when he got used to being carried around and crooned at, he transferred his fear and distrust of Marca's stroking finger to the peanuts she fed him.

"Honestly, he let me stroke him, but he was quite vicious about the peanut. He knew there was something he shouldn't trust.

"It was a tremendously interesting psychological experiment until Trembles leapt to freedom and sought a hermit's existence somewhere in the walls.

"We stilll put food out for him. He comes to get it and leaves a little trail of oatmeal, but we never see him. We just hear him, and we hope he hasn't a girl friend living in his hermit's hut.

"Mice are nice, but a mousey population explosion we can do without."

SUMMERLAND, B.C. (CP)—A cheaply made fruit cooker, invented by a department of agriculture scientist in this Okanagan community, should make small fruit processors competitive with large operators. Astrologer-Philosopher Predicts Masks for Green-Haired Women

MONTREAL (CP) — Green-haired women with flat chests and wearing transparent face masks as a protective covering against dust and germs may be a common sight in 30 years, says astrologer John Manolesco.

The Romanian-born astrologer holds a master's degree in philosophy and teaches at two leading Montreal universities. About 12 months ago, he says, he predicted the election of Pierre Elliott Trudeau as prime minister, and the deaths in the United States of Martin Luther King and Robert Kennedy.

He forecast the startling future of clothing styles recently by explaining that the planet Pluto is partly to blame for the trends which will usher in the year 2000.

"We are witnessing the close of a Pluto cycle," he said.

"In astrology, Pluto rules the subconscious and the generative functions of the body. It sustains, repairs, renews through the burning up and casting out of dead material from death to life. The planet also rules the house of death, transformation, metamorphosis and regeneration."

The adverse influences ascribed to Pluto are immorality, lack of scruples, indecency, disrespect for law and authority.

Pluto now is in the zodiacal sign of Virgo and is scheduled to enter the sign of Libra in December, 1970.

This date represents a new Pluto cycle and its influence will last until December, 1983, he predicts. The period 1983-1996 would see Pluto in Scorpio, with even greater changes.

Other predictions include:

- Women's hair will be died such unnatural colors as turquoise, dark green or dark red. Men will tend to crew cuts or shaven heads or will dye their hair a silver color.
- Domestic life will change and women will participate more in everyday life. There will be a resurgence of women's clubs, where no men are admitted. This will be the political forerunner of a matriarcal political system with women replacing men in top political and diplomatic posts.

Negroes Eye Apartheid As Solution for U.S.

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Separatism—self-imposed black American apartheid—is emerging as a possible new focus of the United States' Negro's civil rights drive.

McKISSICK
. . . black capitalism

Time alone can tell how far the movement goes toward voluntary segregation, replacing what has been an involuntary division of races from the black viewpoint since the arrival of their slave ancestors.

Separatism remains in much of the South after 15 years of pressure and economically, socially and culturally for more than half the country's 22,000,000 black citizens who now live in cities.

Free Enterprise

More American Negroes than ever before now appear to want to keep it that way and conceivably this mood may be encouraged by President Nixon's emphasis so far on trying to solve the race problem with more Negro self-help and a free-enterprise approach replacing assorted federal projects.

At its most extreme, the new separatism is a far-out demand for creating a southern five-state "Republic of New Africa." The state department last May was served a note indicating "willingness" by the republic's first "government" to negotiate the birth.

It exists also in black power or black pride demands such as the one that Swahili be taught next year in Washington schools.

At its most respectable and even quasi-official level, it is foreshadowed in a proposal just endorsed by Orville Freeman, outgoing agriculture secretary, for creation of Soul City in North Carolina.

Pledged Federal Aid

Freeman pledged federal aid for developing 1,810 acres of land into a self-supporting community and training ground for 18,000 rural and urban dwellers. Whites would not be barred but the target would be blacks.

Sponsor Floyd McKissick, who believes in black power as a form of black capitalism, said officials of President Nixon's brand-new administration "have promised us continued support."

The dilemma of today's Negro in the U.S. was described this way in last year's report by the residential commission on civil disorders:

"Our nation is moving toward two societies, one black and one white—separate and unequal."

It said most Negroes originally "desired social racial integration but many are losing hope of ever achieving it because of seemingly implacable white resistance."

"Yet they cannot bring themselves to accept the conclusion that most of the millions of Negroes who are forced to live racially segregated lives must therefore be condemned to inferior lives—inferior educations, housing or status."

In short, if American Negroes can't make any yards towards equality through integration, the answer may lie in separation.

Today, ironically, militant blacks have joined those leading advocates of separatism, the hard-core white segregationists centred in the past in the South and now including many blue-collar workers in the North who voted last November for racist George Wallace's presidential candidacy.

But the concept is also creeping into middle-of-the-road dialogue on the American racial problem.

Rioting Decreasing

Columnist Crosby S. Noyes of the Washington Star, for example, commented recently on statistics showing a marked slow-down in Negro-area rioting since more than 100 communities erupted last April after the assassination of Rev. Martin Luther King.

"Even the most militant elements are turning toward organized political action aimed at securing a greater degree of control by Negroes over their own communities," he said.

"It is unfortunate perhaps that this effort leads to an emphasis on separatism . . . but that may not be very important.

"If anything has been clearly demonstrated over the last few discouraging years, it is that 'integration' as it has been conceived of by the liberals is no infallible cure for all of the complex racial problems that confront the country."

Northern Slums

The concept of Soul City endorsed by Orville Freeman goes back to recognition of a massive internal U.S. migration in which millions of badly-educated southern blacks streamed into northern slums.

That flow has eased somewhat, says the U.S. census bureau, but perhaps only temporarily. Meanwhile, Freeman has been preaching the value of creating new towns for Negroes away from the current problem spots of Washington, New York, Chicago, Los Angeles or Cleveland.

Washington and Newark now are more than 50 per cent Negro, Washington has the highest concentration in the U.S. at 66 to 68 per cent. By 1971, it forecast, New Orleans and Richmond, Va., will join the club and by 1985 cities from Baltimore to Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Oakland and Philadelphia will too.

Endorsed Takeover

The National Conference on Black Power last year featured one resolution endorsed by the 4,000 delegates for immediate takeover of the black areas of American cities.

W. H. Ferry of the Centre for the Study of Democratic Institutions, headed by former Chicago University President Robert Hutchins, says a separate nation "may in the long run prove to be the only way out."

Right now he favors separate cities.

It is a sad commentary that the leading opponent among black Americans to deliberately-created black separatism is the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The NAACP pioneered the assault of the last decade on segregation with a series of long and intelligent appeals to the Supreme Court.

Today, the NAACP is an also-ran in the civil rights stakes and its head, Roy Wilkins, demonstrated that fact by threatening to go to court again—this time to block black student creation on American campuses of all-black dormitories and classes, black studies and other symbols of the new black power.

It was, he said, sheer racism, "patently Jim Crow schools."

Few Appeals Successful

Only 10 of 45 assessment appeals in urban Saanich have been successful.

All but one of the appeals were concluded Friday. The last one will be heard Monday.

The 10 successful appeals saw reductions in 1969 assessments of $505 on improvements and $4,470 on land.

PRIEST RUNS FOR MAYOR

PERU, Ill. (AP) — Rev. Leo L. Henkel for years urged his parishioners to become involved in community affairs. Now 72 and retired, he's taking his own advice and is running for mayor.

Father Henkel, who retired as pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church in this north central Illinois community of 11,000 in 1963, considers himself "unemployed." He says: "If I said I didn't believe a clergyman should talk about public matters, I would be going contrary to my whole life's practice."

The mayorality primary March 4 is non-partisan, and the two top vote-getters will face each other April 15 in the runoff election. Three other candidates besides the priest are in the running.

Although Father Henkel regards himself as an independent in politics, he labels himself "a conservative at heart—closer to the Republican position than to the Great Society."

More than half of the people of Peru are Catholics, but Father Henkel doesn't think this will help him become mayor. In fact, he thinks it will hurt him. "The older ones think the cloth should remain in the sanctuary," he says.

Island Catholics Speak to the Pope

Vancouver Island's Roman Catholics are swamping Bishop Remi De Roo's headquarters with opinions he'll pass on to Pope Paul.

Last week, Bishop De Roo, head of the Roman Catholic Island diocese, circulated a questionnaire among 20,000 Roman Catholics.

So far, more than 15,000 have responded, and many more are still pouring in.

Every five years, the bishop submits a report to the Pope in Rome, and this time he appealed to members of his diocese to participate in the report by answering the questions he sent them.

When the census is completed, men and women of other faiths will be invited to answer the questions, so that Bishop De Roo's report on Vancouver Island may be as comprehensive as possible.

Here are some of the questions:

What aspects of your religion or belief matter most to you?

What are the main problems your family is facing today? What do you think you and other church members can do about them?

What do you consider the main problem facing the church today, either in the diocese or throughout the world? What can be done about them?

What comments would you like to make about the place of the laity and clergy in today's church? What changes, if any, would you like to see in the particular roles or functions of the laity and clergy in the church?

These questions are contained in the second part of the printed form circulated throughout Vancouver Island.

The first part deals with routine information such as age, sex and marital status.

Persons answering the questionnaire do not have to give their name or address.

"The purpose of this census is to obtain information, not to probe into people's private lives," says Sister Teresa Alnwick, co-ordinator of what is called Project Contact.

"If possible, we would like people of all faiths to assist us in this quest for information."

Although the meeting formally closed at 9:45 p.m., the discussion continued until around 11:30 p.m.

This Sunday, lending color to the proceedings will be Sing-Out Victoria, a group of 70 youngsters combining contemporary folk singing with traditional choral discipline.

Monks to Burn Food In Name of Peace

By RAM SUNDAR
Canadian Press Corespondent

BOMBAY (CP) — A group of Hindu monks here proposes to organize a massive prayer to ensure world peace.

Known as Maha Yagna, or the great sacrifice, the event will attract more than 125,000 high-caste Brahmin priests from all over Asia, and some half a million visitors.

The ritual, based on a 2,500-year-old Hindu religious text, will consist of round-the-clock prayers for 21 days and the offering of tons of foodstuffs to Agni, the god of fire.

Into a huge sacred fire pit will flow honey, melted butter, rice, wheat, spices and almonds.

As the flames burn up the offerings, Brahmins in yellow and orange robes will chant special prayers for world peace. In particular, they will ask Lord Vishnu, the Hindu god of protection, to prevail on Agni and the lesser gods of destruction to halt the engines of war.

In all, more than $17,000,000 will be spent on the event, scheduled for July.

His Holiness Chaitanya Kashiji, chief organizer of the ritual, told reporters here that a nuclear war cannot be ruled out and the only way to stop it was to make "a direct appeal to the Lord."

The move has received wide publicity in the Indian press. Many journals, including the influential Economic Times of Bombay, have criticized the idea of consigning vast quantities of foodstuffs to the fire.

In angry letters to newspapers many people have also pointed out that it is a "criminal waste" to spend millions on what one housewife calls "this crazy attempt to please the gods."

Some left-wing politicians have also asked the government to ban the ceremony.

Among the suggestions made to Kashiji is that he should spend the money he proposes to collect on slum clearance schemes in Bombay, Washington and Moscow and on the welfare of low-caste Hindus, American Negroes and unemployed Russian youths.

United Church To Present Baroque Music

Three talented musicians from Vancouver will present a recital of baroque music in First United Church Friday at 8 p.m.

They are Violet Goossen, soprano; Paul Douglas, flute, and Suzanne Gibson, harpsichord and organ. Their program will include Bach arias for soprano, flute and continuo, and flute sonatas by Telemann, Vivaldi and Blavet.

Violet Goossen is a Vancouver-trained singer who has gained a reputation for a clear, flexible voice and sensitive musicianship, especially in the field of sacred concert and oratorio music.

Paul Douglas is assistant professor in the faculty of music at the University of B.C. and a well-known flute recitalist.

Suzanne Gibson is a Fellow of the Royal Canadian College of Organists and has given numerous recitals throughout the Pacific Northwest, including one at Christ Church Cathedral in Victoria last year.

Victoria Loses An Optimistic Man

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Church Editor

"No man is too broken to be pieced together again," says Brigadier Cecil Bonar, ex-superintendent of the Salvation Army men's social and rehabilitation centre at 521 Johnson Street.

This philosophy has sustained the lively, good-humored brigadier during 38 years' service to people in trouble.

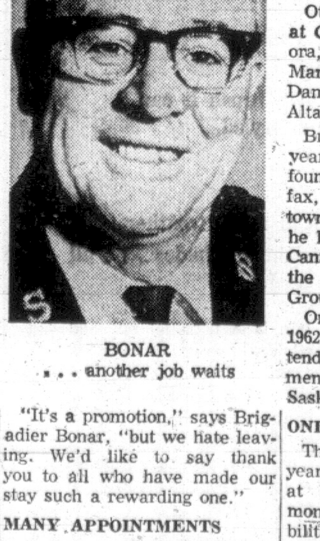
"What we do for people is really a means to an end. If you can get a man right within himself—that is within his soul—his social needs and problems clear up of themselves."

Since he came to Victoria in October, 1966, Brigadier Bonar has been a leading personality with the Salvation Army, the Greater Victoria Council of Churches and the Saanich Kiwanis Club, of which he was recently elected a director.

Tonight, with his wife Effie, Brigadier Bonar will say goodbye to all his friends here and head to Toronto.

TO HEAD HOSTEL

There he will take over as administrator of the Salvation Army Men's Hostel at Sherbourne Street — the largest in Canada.



BONAR
. . . another job waits

"It's a promotion," says Brigadier Bonar, "but we hate leaving. We'd like to say thank you to all who have made our stay such a rewarding one."

MANY APPOINTMENTS

A native of North Sidney, N.S., he was apprenticed in the building trade until 1930 when he entered the Salvation Army Training College at Toronto.

On graduation he was appointed to the men's social service centre at Montreal. In 1935, he was given his first pastoral charge at Whitby, Ont.

Other appointments followed at Clinton, Tweed, Picton, Aurora, North Bay, Sault Ste, Marie; Dartmouth, N.S.; Notre Dame, Que., and Lethbridge, Alta.

Brigadier Bonar spent three years at Port-aux-Basque, Newfoundland; two years at Halifax, N.S.; two years at Gagetown, N.B. Then for three years he had charge of all Sally Ann Canadian Red Shield Clubs with the Fourth Infantry Brigade Group at Soest, Germany.

On returning to Canada in 1962, he was appointed superintendent of the Salvation Army's men's social service centre at Saskatoon.

ONLY ANSWER

This was followed by two years of welfare and prison work at Lethbridge, Alta., and 14 months at the social and rehabilitation centre at Edmonton.

The Victoria job followed. At the social centre at 521 Johnson Street, he has worked for a program which he believes is the only answer to the increase in alcoholism and the number of socially maladjusted men who frequent the centre.

"We need work therapy," he says. "I don't believe any man in sound health should receive anything for nothing. We need workshop facilities, as well as recreation, sleeping and counselling facilities.

"If a person can pay for the furniture they get in our Thrift Shops — even if it's only a nickel or a dime— we'd like them to pay.

"It means so much to them spiritually and morally and it helps us to help others like themselves."

A year after he came to Victoria, Brigadier Bonar was recalled to Germany to set up Red Shield services with the Royal Canadian Air Force at Lahr.

His cheerfulness is a mystery to many less optimistic souls around him.

"Are you never discouraged?" they ask.

"Sometimes," he says, "but it doesn't last long. There's always a light on the horizon and it gets brighter as you work towards it."

Debate to Inaugurate Teachers' Convention

Two of the authors of the widely-acclaimed B.C. Teachers' Federation report on education will be in Victoria March 6 for a public debate organized by Greater Victoria teachers.

Jim Carter, vice-principal at Vancouver's Point Grey secondary school, and Mrs. Lorill Hanney, an intermediate supervisor in Burnaby, will join pairs of local teachers and school trustees in probing the elimination of school grades.

The Vancouver educators were on a team of four which produced "Involvement: The Key to Better Schools" last September. The BCTF-commissioned report speaks out strongly for continuous progress and individualized learning, systems of teaching which spell an end to traditional grade divisions.

The debate will be at Oak Bay junior secondary school at 7:45 p.m. and is the public prelude to the local teachers' convention the following day.

MORE PROGRAMS

The convention format this year is designed to encourage more conversation between teachers from kindergarten to Grade 12. In the past the convention has presented specialty programs which drew all the teachers of a subject together.

Five simultaneous programs will be presented this year, each centred on one of the senior secondary schools in the district and including the elementary and junior secondary schools which feed pupils to it.

Students Back Campaign For Bigger Role

A union of English students Friday received a shot in the arm in its efforts to get a voice in the decision-making processes of the largest department at the University of Victoria.

At a noon-hour meeting in the lobby of the MacLaurin Building 300 students approved the union's aims which, if implemented, would see students sitting on departmental committees as full voting members.

Several of the 53 English department faculty members were present at the meeting and took part in the discussions.

Jeff Green, a member of the union's 14-man steering committee, read statements endorsing the union concept from instructors, administrators and the president of the students' council.

Mr. Green estimated that out of the 4,900 enrolment at the university, more than 2,000 students are registered in one or more English courses.

STUDENT ATTITUDE

"Our attitude is that anyone taking an English course has an interest in what happens in the English department," he said.

The surge of support for the union followed a recent move in the geography department which granted student representation on all departmental committees, including full voting membership at department meetings.

In a series of show-of-hands votes, students at the Friday meeting decided that future meetings of the English union should be open to faculty members, but that the faculty should not have a vote.

It was learned that the English department will meet next week to discuss the question of student representation.

The meeting adjourned after 40 minutes as most of the students took part in what Mr. Green described as a "quiet stroll" through the Sedgewick Building, where department offices are located, to demonstrate solidarity of support for the union.

Bid to Clear Canal

CAIRO (Reuters) — Talks began here Friday on plans to free 14 ships trapped in the Suez Canal since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Three Swedish and Dutch experts had a 4½-hour meeting with Suez Canal officials on behalf of shipowners of eight countries who have offered to clear the southern end of the 110-mile waterway at their own expense.

DETENTION HOMES MAY END

The government Friday announced a plan that might someday see the end of Brannan Lake and Willingdon schools as detention homes for young offenders.

The announcement said 'immediate steps are being taken in the direction of providing specialized homes in key areas of the province" for the young child needing specialized care after a court appearance.

"This will mean that young children who have formerly been sent to Brannan Lake and Willingdon school by the courts will no longer be detained there, but will be kept in these specialized homes in the community."

In these homes, local social, medical and psychiatric personnel will be used so "complete rehabilitative measures can be made for the youngsters in the shortest possible time."

David Barrett (NDP—Coquitlam), who repeated his annual demand Thursday night that 12-year-old and younger children should not be sent to the institutions, hailed the announcement.

"But why did it take so many years and how many kids' lives have been damaged?" he asked.

"It's proven what I've been saying since 1961 and I only hope that they put an early deadline on implementing the new policy."

Budget Debate Over: Second Phase Begins

The B.C. legislature begins the second half of its current session Monday scrutinizing the specific estimates of the province's first billion-dollar budget.

A roll-call division Friday which pitted 30 Social Credit MLAs against the combined 23 NDP and Liberal MLAs approved the budget in principle after two weeks of debate to clear the way for committee consideration of departmental estimates.

Wind-up speakers for the parties were Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, Ernie Hall (NDP—Surrey) and Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound).

Mr. Peterson said the opposition jeers that the budget's size showed the government was about to disappear like the dinosaurs ignored the "miracle — which is defined as a rare and unusual thing" it represented.

"Consider the increases—$49.5 million for education, $25.2 million for hospital insurance, $12 million for social welfare, $32 million for provincial secretary, including medicare," he said.

"And they dare to condemn and try to tear down this mammoth," he shouted at the opposition.

Mr. Peterson also praised Premier Bennett's role as a booster for Confederation, providing much of the transfer funds used by the federal government to help the poor provinces.

He also said that when the national medicare plan was under fire at last week's constitutional talks, Premier Bennett came to the federal government's aid.

"It is fair to say, as well, that it was the premier of this province who put forward the most constructive proposals to lessen the discrepancy in standards of living and economic opportunities of Canadians, wherever they may live," Mr. Peterson said.

He also repeated that Mr. Bennett's proposals to divide Canada into five regions "is no joke" and is being taken seriously by Premiers Robarts of Ontario, Strom of Alberta and Smith of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Peterson said B.C. is fortunate in having a balanced billion-dollar budget without tax increases and "fortunate indeed in having the most experienced and most capable minister of finance in all Canada.

CRITICIZES BUDGET

Mr. Williams criticized the budget for failure to provide sufficient support for health, educational and municipal services.

He also said it showed the government's complete failure to recognize the worth of establishing a provincial economic council "which would reach down into the communities and tap the skills, knowledge and experience of the people to help solve our problems."

Premier Bennett had accumulated "over $200 million surplus in three years" and had become " a sort of bookkeeping machine," said Mr. Hall.

"He has demonstrated that his motivation and interest is not in the fields of education, health and human care. . . ."

"Hoarding cash is crazy and I don't think any of the various groups that come here, the trustees, the PTA, the unions, the farmers, any of them will put up with that nonsense much longer."

Mr. Hall said the government's AA credit rating with a New York investment company bore little weight in comparison "to rating the performance of the government with an X at the ballot box."

Social Credit candidates had lost five byelections in the months leading up to the session, three to the NDP and two, including Oak Bay, to the Liberals.

And he scored the Liberals for what he suggested is lack of concern for the proceedings of the legislature. It was not the legislature that was irrelevant, but the Liberals "trapped on the expensive beach-front property of the province."

Mr. Hall said the NDP were voting against the budget because they opposed "one man government," protection of "the power elite," the "mammoth give-away of our resources," and inattention to health, welfare and education.

He said the government did not want to change present provincial expropriation legislation because it was needed in such projects as the B.C. Hydro dams and the Roberts Bank port construction.

And he said he was "attacking" the government for its failure to re-convene the legislature's drugs committee and enact legislation that could end the soft-drug and glue-sniffing problems.

Mining Control Bills Win Half the Battle

The government won only half its battle Friday to get the legislature's approval in principle of its program to control land destruction by strip mining in B.C.

Second reading was given amendments to the Mines Regulation Act, but debate was adjourned by an NDP MLA before the Coal Mines Regulations Act could be put to the test.

Mines Minister Frank Richter has said sections of both acts concerning reclamation of land damaged in surface mining operations are identical.

The first act passed without dissent on a voice vote and will be referred to the mining and railways committee. Implications of the vote are that the opposition favors some such program of control, but indications in debate are that it will haggle fiercely over some of its details during committee discussions.

DELAY SECOND BILL

The government apparently believed the second bill would receive second reading swiftly, but some NDP members believe some sections should be thoroughly debated because it is this bill that applies specifically to coal mining. The first deal with all other types of minerals.

It was Kaiser Coal Corp.'s takeover of Crowsnest Industries in the East Kootenays and the company's plan to strip-mine 45 million tons of coal for export to Japan in the next 15 years that prompted the current outcry and legislation.

Mr. Strachan told the House most of his party's criticisms of the first bill applied to the second and "we want to get it into committee so the committee can get on with the job of correcting errors in this legislation."

But when he had finished speaking, New Democrats David Barrett (Coquitlam) and Leo Nimsick (Kootenay) repeated their earlier criticisms. William Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) was on his feet when the clock reached 6 p.m. and he asked that debate be adjourned.

Chief criticism before the vote was given on the Mines Regulation Act concerned the fact that prosecutions for breaches are left to the discretion of the minister.

WIDE DISCRETION

L. Allan Williams (L—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) said the discretion "is much too wide," and that power should not be subject to the "whims" of any single government member.

"While the principle of this is good, the provisions of the bill are inadequate."

It was not important that money, in the form of a bond, be available to clean up a mess after it has been made. The bill should ensure no mess was made in the first place.

Ed Smith (SC—North Peace River) said there is no need to add to government bureaucracy by creating another department to police the regulations when the mining department now has sufficient trained personnel.

And he said if the regulations were toughened in committee, it would do neither industry nor the working man in the province any good.

NO BUTCHART GARDENS

There were many things to be said for reclamation, but "it is not necessary to make a Butchart's Gardens out of every old quarry or pit in this province."

"It is legislation we can live with and so can the industry that is going to be affected by it," he concluded.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Canada Beat U.S. on Ice in 1813

By BOB BOWMAN

Bowman

Canada can usually defeat the U.S. at hockey, but one of the first victories on the ice was far more serious. It took place Feb. 22, 1813.

Earlier in the month, the Americans raided Brockville and returned to Ogdensburg, N.Y., with 52 prisoners, and a large number of horses, cattle, pigs and chickens.

The Glengarry Regiment was stationed at Prescott, about 12 miles away, and the commanding officer, Major Macdonnell, wanted to hit back. However, Sir George Prevost, the governor of Canada, would not give him permission. So Macdonnell took matters into his own hands. He organized a "demonstration" on the ice, and went out with 480 soldiers and three pieces of artillery.

The St. Lawrence River, about one mile wide at that point, was completely frozen. Suddenly Macdonnell changed the demonstration into a real attack on Ogdensburg.

The Canadians were completely exposed to fire from the U.S. shore but kept going, fought their way into Ogdensburg, and forced the Americans to retreat into the woods.

Then Macdonnell's men returned to Prescott with 74 prisoners, 12 guns, 300 tents, and a large quantity of ammunition and food. There were no more raids on Prescott-Brockville for the rest of the war.

Now Prescott and Ogdensburg are connected by a fine international bridge near the western end of the St. Lawrence Seaway, another monument to Canada-U.S. friendship and co-operation. During the early part of the Second World War, when Canada was fighting Germany but the U.S. was neutral, Prime Minister Mackenzie King met President Roosevelt at Ogdensburg and signed an agreement that helped Canada obtain war supplies from the U.S.

Other events Feb. 22:

1758—General Montcalm arrived in Montreal to organize defences.

1785—Laws of Britain were put in force in Cape Breton.

1851—Bytown Packet became Ottawa Citizen.

1873—Father of Confederation S. L. Tilley became minister of finance.

1887—Conservatives led by Sir John A. Macdonald won general election.

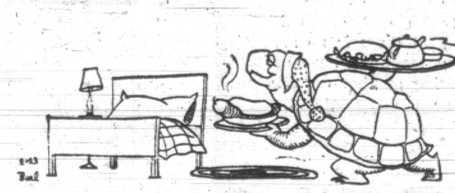
The Wonderful World of Animals



By Dr. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Heap, my tortoise, didn't show any signs of wanting to hibernate this year so I just let him go on staying awake. Did I do wrong? A friend who has had several tortoises in the last two years says not insisting he go to sleep will shorten his life.—F.E.

DEAR F.E.: If your friend had several tortoises in two years, perhaps he isn't much of an expert on longevity of the species after all. If Heap had hibernated on his own, well, fine. But trying to force him into it when he wasn't psychologically ready for such a deep sleep would have made it his last deep sleep as well. A successful, hibernating animal prepares for the event by changes in thyroid and other glandular activity which results in a period of high living—or at least heavy eating. As fat accumulates, activity lessens and the animal finally stops eating because it is literally loaded with fat anyway. (The skinny, malnourished animal who stops eating and then appears to hibernate isn't really sleeping—he's dying.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've been reading your column a long time now. I like it, but have one criticism. You are forever telling people to run to their veterinarian for every little thing that comes along. This can get ridiculous. My sister does this and she spends a small fortune on her nine-year-old toy poodle but it has never yet been near death's door, or even very sick for that matter.—T.C.

DEAR T.C.: Thanks for your letter. And thank your sister for me, too. Her concern and care for her dog helps to prove my point. Many toy poodles (a rather delicate breed, by the way) never reach their ninth year. Most of those who do have had adequate care, including the doctor's, from puppyhood on. Having any ailment of unknown severity attended to early is a basic rule for pet longevity. Obviously your sister hasn't waited until her dog was deathly ill before seeking help. If she had, her pet might not be alive today.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have a pair of Fisher's love birds. We like them so much we are considering getting more. We have a big enough cage for more, but would they fight?—D.B.

DEAR D.B.: No, these African love birds are gregarious—happiest when kept in flocks rather than single pairs.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My chinchilla, Charlie, has a bad habit of chewing his fur. I understand this is a common bad habit in this breed and that castration will stop it. Is this correct?—S.P.

DEAR S.P.: Fur-chewing definitely is a problem with this species. I'd assume, though, you aren't planning on pelting your pet so this condition may be less critical. You can't count on castration to cure Charlie Chinchilla's chewing. It's often done for this reason, but results are disappointing—for all concerned.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have noticed my crow, Jasper, has extremely sharp vision and that if I try to hide anything from him he always spots it before I can. What makes him so "sharp-eyed" if I may use that expression?—L.D.

DEAR L.D.: Birds have a visual advantage out of proportion to their size because their eyes are comparatively large, allowing a relatively large image to be cast on the retina. Birds, and birds of prey especially, carry massive concentrations of cones and nerve fibres in the retina. In Jasper's case it is not so much that his vision is actually that much better than yours, it's that he assimilates detail faster. Birds in flight must have rapid visual perception or they miss too much. Obviously, a perching bird still retains this ability to scan and retain detail at the same time.

Tips for The Home Gardener

Why Do Fruit Trees Fail to Produce?

By JACK BEASTALL

Jack

Several readers have told us they failed either to spray or to prune their fruit trees last spring and therefore had no fruit to harvest. This leads us to a rather prevalent misconception, namely that fruit bearing is dependent on trees being pruned and sprayed every spring.

Horticultural books are responsible for creating this idea in minds of home gardeners. Authors stress pruning from the time trees are planted, but fail to tell their readers the reasons.

Out of ten books, some devoted solely to fruit production and others touching the subject briefly, only one outlines the whys and wherefores of pruning and spraying.

Most of us have seen abandoned orchards with fruits on the trees although no culture has been practised for years.

While these fruits may not meet the arbitrary standards we have set for commercial production, nevertheless, the trees will continue to produce fruits (or more specifically, seeds) as long as vigor remains.

The basic reasons for pruning are to control the quantity of fruit thereby controlling its quality, the placement of fruit on branches in relation to light and air, to overcome to some degree the natural tendency to biennial bearing, and to mould the tree to a size and shape suitable to limited space.

The purpose of spraying fruit trees is to maintain some measure of control over pests and diseases to which the particular fruits are subject.

If we have no qualms when we find a maggot in an apple, if distorted shape and disease-damaged skin and tissue does not detract from flavor, we shall be satisfied with fruit produced by unsprayed trees.

When a tree, normally producing fruit, fails to set a crop, the reason is not associated with either pruning or spraying.

Most common cause of crop failure is weather condition at time of flowering.

Adverse weather can affect fruit production in several ways. Frost at blossom time can damage reproductive organs so that pollination is prevented.

Low temperatures (below freezing) after growth has commenced may kill flower buds and prevent blossoming.

Frequent rain when flowers are open will wash pollen from stamens so that it is not there to be picked up by pollinating insects.

Both strong wind and rain limit activities of insects effecting pollination.

Keeping a simple record of weather conditions from just prior to blossoming up to time when 90 per cent of the petals have fallen, enables the fruit grower to pin-point the cause of a bumper crop or a crop failure.

When we know for certain that weather was responsible we shall not be tempted to experiment with fertilizers, trace elements, root pruning, and other practices that could cause temporary or permanent damage to our trees.

On all spray calendars for fruit production are recommendations for pre-blossom and post-blossom applications to control insects laying eggs in the seed capsule at the base of blossoms.

The grubs that hatch from these eggs are the ones which devour the immature seeds and cause the small fruits to drop.

Timing of these sprays is more critical than most home gardeners realize. For this reason most spray calendars carry photographs showing exact stage of blossoming at which the sprays should be applied.

If we decide sprays are necessary in the home garden, we cannot afford to use hit and miss timing because we shall either kill the insects we depend on for pollination or limit their visitations by making the blossoms distasteful.

When this happens, the home gardener is directly responsible for a poor set of fruit.

Before a fruit tree can be properly pruned, it is necessary to understand its fruiting habit, whether it bears on fruiting spurs, whether these spurs continue to produce fruits for five, 10 or 15 years, or whether fruit is borne on new growths made the previous season.

Far too many gardeners have the idea that pruning consists of cutting off any piece of wood projecting from a branch. They remove fruiting spurs and fruiting wood and have little or no fruit to harvest in fall.

The pruner must know the difference in fruiting habit between an apple, a pear, a plum, a cherry and a peach, also differences in bearing habits among varieties of each kind of fruit.

Until this basic knowledge is acquired, there is no guarantee that pruning will increase quantity and quality of the crop.

This does not mean that the home gardener should not, or cannot do his own pruning.

He can do all that is necessary to keep his trees in healthy production, providing he will spend a little time learning basic principles from books and bulletins.

Quizzing The Gardener

By JACK BEASTALL

Q.—Can I start sowing all my vegetable seeds now? Last year my early sowings did better than later ones because the soil gets dry.—Newcomer, Saanich.

A.—Try vegetables as listed in Today's Work for Week column, and work at getting compost ready to add to your soil for holding moisture in summer. You will need to water vegetables perhaps twice weekly in summer until you improve the soil.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

If soil and weather is suitable, plant anemone and ranunculus tubers in well drained, but well enriched borders. These will give brilliant long season color.

Polyanthus primulas may need division if not done last fall. Do not allow roots to dry out while working.

Sow seed indoors of pansies, violas, snapdragons, stocks — all hardy enough to go outdoors by late April.

In a heated greenhouse, or other well lit and slightly warmed space, take cuttings of geraniums, indoor carnations and fuchsias. Main batch of these cuttings will be taken in late March.

Tuberous begonias and gloxinias can be started in terralite or peat. Keep slightly damp and temperature at 60 deg. F. for rooting and sprouting, then lower.

If patch of sunny, well drained soil is available, sow parsnip, early peas, broad beans, garlic, shalots.

Boat Show Boasts Spanish Treasure

Canada's largest boat show sets sail Feb. 28-March 9, at the Pacific National Exhibition grounds with a full load of exhibits and displays, including more than $1 million in Spanish treasure.

The Vancouver Boat Show will again fill five PNE buildings—the food, showmart and women's buildings, the Agrodome and the Pacific Coliseum.

The show, largest annual production at the PNE except for the fair itself, features more than 260,000 square feet of exhibit space, with more than 400 exhibitors with some 600 booths and displays.

The show is entering its fourth year here under the sponsorship of the Marine Dealers' Association of B.C. and the Marpole-Richmond Sportsmen.

It is managed by Harmon-O'Loughlin Enterprises, an organization which generated an attendance record (99,073) its first year here, and has seen crowd totals grow from there. Attendance in 1968 totalled 136,292 persons.

Highlights of this year's show include:

- An exhibit of more than $1,250,000 in Spanish gold, recovered off the Florida coast from a Spanish treasure fleet which went down in a hurricane in 1715.
- The world's largest collection of Danish hand-carved ships in bottles, some 300 of them are being exhibited for only the third time ever. Previous appearances were at the Brussells World Fair and the 1961 St. Lawrence Seaway Fair.
- A display of navigational instruments and artifacts used by Sir Francis Drake, as well as those used by Sir Francis Chichester on his single-handed, 274-day round-the-world trip in 1966-67.
- A collection of 150 antique bird decoys from the collection of William J. Mackey of Belford, N.J. Mr. Mackey has furnished many decoys to the Smithsonian Institution and to the IBM Collection.
- Luther G. Jerstad of Eugene, Ore., a member of the U.S. expedition which successfully scaled the fabled mountain of Mount Everest in 1963, will lecture and show color movies of the assault.
- A collection of pistols, rifles and shotguns of North America, dating back to the 1800s.

The boat show also will feature its popular stage show in the Agrodome.

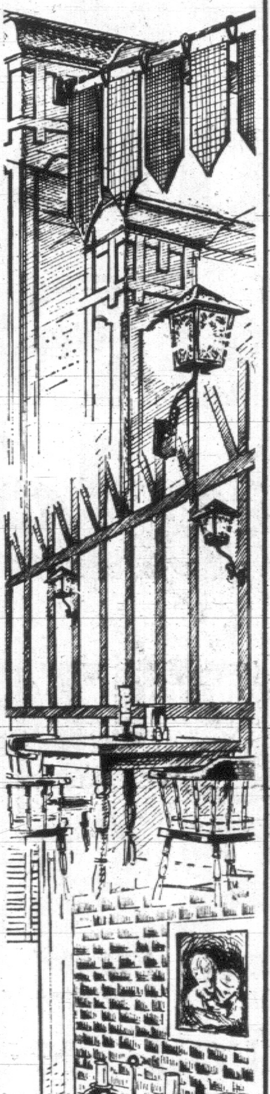
What's New at Eatons

The special charm of our Victoria Room has always been its little-bit-of-old-England school of decor. The wood panelling, the wide windows that look out over the Inner Harbour. Years ago you could watch the Princess steamers plying the Triangle run while you sipped tea. Somehow, one knew, it could never be a little bit of old Polynesia, or old Vienna, or even new swinging London. So when it came time to spruce up the Victoria Room, we kept to the original. There's a little more Tudor flavour about it, what with the red and green pennants, the coach-style lamps on posts and walls and the brick-like wall, but it is still what it always has been, a place where the food is good and the atmosphere leisurely.



Newly Decorated the Victoria Room Lounge
adjacent to the dining room, it offers you a place to relax while you wait for lunch, tea or dinner or just while you wait for friends. If you plan a shopping spree in town, take your break in the Victoria Room. Luncheon, tea-time or dinner (on Thursdays or Fridays) offers you a wide menu choice: from old English style fish and chips to tea-time favourites such as toasted crumpets or warm apple pie—even dieters can take heart with the Calorie Counter's lunch. For the gourmet, the Victoria Room menu presents a tempting array of Pacific Ocean Sea foods.
Where does it all come from? . . .

. . . a gleaming new kitchen
absolutely spotless and a chef's dream to work in. The kitchen has just recently undergone a complete modernization—with shiny stainless steel gleaming from every wall. New equipment that means a wider range in the menu plus a high standard of cleanliness.

GAGLARDI SIGNS ON SCRAP HEAP

Those "Sorry for the Inconvenience" signs will soon be no more.

The highways department sign shop in Langford is producing a new sign.

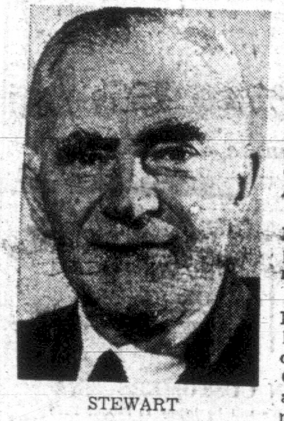
"Building for the Future of B.C." is the greeting motorists will receive when they approach highway construction work.

A spokesman said this sign, which also says "highway improvement project, government of B.C., department of highways," will be used on all highway construction projects.

The "Sorry for the Inconvenience" signs carried the signature of P. A. Gaglardi, the former highways minister who resigned a year ago.

U.K. Protects Ties With U.S.

LONDON (CP)—Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart said today Britain refused to trade its friendship with the United States for a European trade alliance with President de Gaulle of France.



STEWART
. . . rebuffs France

Stewart's statement was the first by a British government official since Friday's disclosure—on the eve of President Nixon's trip to Europe—that de Gaulle had sought British help to form a new alliance that would scuttle the European Common Market and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Foreign Minister Michel Debre of France denied the report and criticized Britain for releasing it.

Stewart told a seminar of the Fabian Society, a socialist intellectual group: "We cannot accept what appears to be Gen. de Gaulle's thesis that friendship and alliance with America is necessarily the same as dependence on America."

DEFENDS POLICY

Stewart defended the policy of Western European allies on maintaining close ties with the Americans.

"The United States alone among the super powers in the world is a democracy," he said. "For example, people who disagree with the policy of the U.S. government on Vietnam can and do say so.

"This is one very powerful reason why we should want good British-American relations and it is one powerful reason behind the existence of NATO."

In the British version of the French proposal, de Gaulle was quoted as saying France alone of the Western European states had established a position of total independence from the United States. British sources quoted him as saying the pro-Americanism of France's European friends represents the main obstacles to a true European unity and independence.

OBJECTIVE UNCHANGED

Meanwhile, informed sources said today Britain's basic objective will continue to be membership in the Common Market because it thinks it is the best path toward integration of Europe.

Britain rejected outright some of de Gaulle's ideas and reacted coolly toward the others. The suggestions were made to Christopher Soames, British ambassador to France, during a meeting with de Gaulle Feb. 4, the sources said.

The sources said that Britain

Man Stabs Girl In Plane Incident

AMSTERDAM (Reuters) — A man with a knife attacked and injured a 14-year-old girl passenger aboard a Dutch airliner over the Atlantic early today, an airline spokesman said today.

The girl was identified as Martha Nijuis, flying from Montreal to The Netherlands with her parents to visit relatives.

Royal Dutch Airline officials first said the girl was Canadian but later said they were not sure if she was of Dutch or Canadian nationality.

The girl was taken to hospital with face and hand injuries as soon as the plane landed at Amsterdam Airport.

Her attacker was identified as M. R. Zadourian, a 24-year-old Iranian pipe fitter who worked in Toronto for 11 months.

The man was tied up and confined at the rear of the KLM DC-8 on its overnight flight from Montreal to Amsterdam because of his aggressive attitude to passengers.

But he cut himself free with the knife and assailed the girl, who happened to be sitting near him, the airline spokesman said.

The spokesman for KLM said the man had objected to being returned to Tehran from Toronto.

Arab Countries on Alert For Israeli Retaliation

Times News Services

The Middle East situation is deteriorating to a point where terrorism may sweep the antagonists into a new war.

There is little doubt that Israeli military forces are tugging at the leash, anxious to retaliate against the latest incidents, one of them in historically-neutral Switzerland

The question being asked in most Arab capitals today is where, when and how will the Israelis strike next.

Friday's terrorist blast in a Jerusalem supermarket removed any Arab doubts that the Israelis will launch a retaliatory blow for Tuesday's Arab guerrilla attack on an El Al airliner at Zurich Airport.

The four likeliest Arab targets are Egypt, Jordan, Syria and Lebanon. The four governments disclaim responsibility for the guerrillas' acts but they all have expressed varying degrees of support for the guerrilla movement.

They are Israel's closest neighbors and all report their defences on the alert for an expected counter-blow.

The Lebanese, still reeling from the political and economic repercussions of Israel's attack on Beirut International Airport Dec. 28, are worried.

The next blow is expected to be equally spectacular. Speculation here includes the possibility of another strike on an Arab airport, attacks on highways, bridges, dams or oil installations, or a concerted swoop on Arab civilian airlines, in the air or on the ground.

Meanwhile, Ambassador Gunnar Jarring will shift his Middle East peace operations next week to his headquarters in Nicosia, Cyprus, a United Nations spokesman annunced.

This plan appeared to represent a realization on Jarring's part that he cannot expect quick four-power agreement here on action to buttress his role in discussions with the Arabs and Israelis.

Madness Leading to Big War?

By DAN MORGAN

BONN (WP) — There are growing signs in West Germany that the country's political leaders were having second thoughts in the developing Berlin crisis.

In public opinion, the press and the private remarks of political officials, there were definite indications that Communist pressure has finally begun to diminish Bonn's enthusiasm for electing the federal president in the city of West Berlin in March.

"This is madness, the kind of policy which could lead us right into World War Three," remarked one Social Democratic official.

NO QUICK CHANGE

However, high West German sources reached late Friday did not give the impression that they were ready actually to change the election site, at least for now.

New Communist pressure in the last 24 hours took the form of a Moscow announcement of troop manoeuvres of the Soviet Union and East German peoples army in early March, to coincide with the election.

The German press office reported Friday night that Soviet ambassador Semyon Tsarapkin was standing by for a possible meeting with Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger.

German sources said that Kiesinger and All German Affairs Minister Herbert Wehner—both of whom have had serious doubts about holding the election in West Berlin — conferred Thursday on the Berlin question.

There were persistent reports in authoritative West German circles of renewed interest in probing Soviet readiness for a compromise solution, involving a revocation of the West German decision coupled with some friendly gesture by the East Germans or Soviets.

The French government urged the West Germans last fall to try to strike a bargain with East Germany which would reopen talks on West Berliners getting visiting passes for East Berlin, in exchange for transferring the electoral meeting to West German territory.

On Thursday the opposition Free Democratic Party broke the ice by calling openly for a reassessment of the Berlin decision between the Bonn parties. Within one of the governmental parties (the Social Democrats) Bondestag officials said the possibility of talks with the Free Democrats was not being ruled out.

NO DISGRACE

The FPD contended Thursday that it would be no disgrace to transfer the meeting since sufficient solidarity with the city would be demonstrated by the combined effect of last week's visit to the city by Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain and the scheduled Feb. 27 visit of Mr. Nixon there.

BLACK POWER SIGNS UP INDIANS

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto's Black Power movement Friday formed a coalition with Indian activists known as the Black Liberation Front and its Indian Supporters.

At a meeting of 200 black militants, Indians and students, Jose Garcia, executive secretary of the black Liberation Front of Canada, said the organization is allying itself "with our Indian brothers and eventually with other minority groups similarly oppressed."

Boys Try To Spend $40,000

DALY CITY, Calif. (AP)—If you were 15 or 16 years old and stumbled upon $40,000 in stolen cash, what would you do?

Three Daly City boys took it, another shared it with 47 schoolmates and two adults in a month-long spending spree that came to light Friday.

The money was the major portion of $44,000 stolen from a Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. packet in an armored car at Sunnyvale, Calif., last November.

The armored car driver, Nick Avtonoff, 24, was arrested Thursday and charged with grand theft, but Police Chief Ray W. Savage of suburban Broadmoor said: "He never got to enjoy it."

CHAIN OF EVENTS

The chief related this chain of events:

Three boys, 15 and 16, got jobs last Christmas at a bowling alley in nearby Colma. Assigned to check rental lockers, they found $2,000 in a paper sack and $38,000 in a flight bag.

They took the $2,000 but were afraid to take the rest.

In January, they confided in five older boys, got the master locker key and picked up the $38,000.

Roger D. Belaskie, 24, an unemployed linen worker, got onto it, told the boys—incorrectly — that police were on their trail. Savage said he got enough to buy a $2,900 car, a $1,900 motorcycle, a $760 color television set, and $400 in rifles, and had $3,200 left when police caught up with him.

Opposition Sees Additional Scandal

Legislative Reporter

The provincial government's plan to bail out the foundering Commonwealth Trust Company's 600 shareholders with a $3 million interest-free loan ran into immediate fire Friday from NDP and Liberal spokesmen who contended it would add one more scandal to the mess.

The bitter reaction to the loan proposal differed sharply from general applause which greeted Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's announcement that a wide-ranging royal commission had been established.

The three-man commission is to find out who put the 50-company Commonwealth group, masterminded by Vancouver lawyer G. Duncan Crux, into serious financial straits.

Peterson said the commission hearings would be in the open to "let the chips fall where they may". It could result in a complete revamping of the still-fledgling Securities Commission Act and other "watchdog" procedures instituted by former attorney-general Robert Bonner.

To Question Gunderson's Role

. . . move criticized

In a telephone interview from Seattle, Crux said he welcomed the royal commission probe and hoped it "would be a dandy," and wide-open to public view.

"I will particularly be interested in having a complete disclosure of what's been going on—including all secret government information and dealings between their departments concerning these matters — made public."

Opposition members' statements indicated that they will ask during the public hearings about the role in company operations of Einar Gunderson, officially connected to the government, whose chartered accountancy firm was auditor of Commonwealth Trust's bookkeeping reports.

Gunderson was appointed first Social Credit finance minister 17 years ago, by co-incidence the same time that Mr. Crux began building his financial empire.

He has for years been a key executive of the government-owned B.C. Hydro and Pacific Great Eastern Railway and also has been identified as the Social Credit Party's chief election campaign fund collector.

'Unfortunate'

Gunderson also was the provisional chairman of Premier Bennett's aborted government-controlled Bank of B.C. and then switched to become chairman of the private Bank of B.C. which finally obtained a federal charter with a board of directors that included the premier's eldest son, R. J. Bennett.

Crux, who left Canada before RCMP seized a warehouse-full of documents from 35 of the Commonwealth companies last fall, last month in an interview in Seattle said the timing of government actions was "unfortunate" because it prompted rumors of a campaign to kill Commonwealth Trust as the chief competitor of the Bank of B.C.

Three Firms Bankrupt, Court Told

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three companies in the Commonwealth group should be declared bankrupt, receiver-manager A. D. Peter Stanley reported in an affidavit filed in the Supreme Court of British Columbia.

He estimated the deficiencies of the three companies total almost $13,000,000.

The affidavit, filed Thursday, listed the companies as Commonwealth Acceptance Corporation Ltd., estimated deficiency $7,059,453; Commonwealth Savings Plan, Ltd., estimated deficiency $2,905,453; and Commonwealth Investors Syndicate Ltd., estimated deficiency $2,973,286.

Mr. Stanley said in the affidavit that he felt it would be in the best interests of all the unsecured creditors and all those having a financial interest in the three companies that each file for bankruptcy.

The affidavit said that none of the three companies is able to meet its obligations.

Berkley Approves Quick Suspensions

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

University of California regents have given campus administrators power to suspend students without an immediate hearing in an attempt to quell chaotic conditions of the Berkeley campus.

The regents met Friday in Berkeley as 2,500 protesters demonstrated noisily nearby, jeering Gov. Ronald Reagan. Several students lobbed firecrackers in the general direction of the meeting.

But heavy rain and 1,000 National Guard troops camped five miles away averted a repetition of Thursday's violent clash between police and 2,000 demonstrators.

The new policy, approved on an 18-to-3 vote, calls for immediate suspension of students when "there is reasonable cause to believe" they disrupted a campus by violence, threats or other activities. Suspended students would have a hearing within two weeks and would face suspension for a full semester or possible expulsion from the university.
